Germany Reports the "Probable" Capture of Boulogne

French Seaport Said To Have Been Seized; Calais Next Objective

Result of Gigantic Battle Hinges on Ability of Nazis To Close in on Trapped Allies

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, May 23—German forces aimed like a spear at the heart of England "probably" have taken the French seaport of Boulogne, authorized sources asserted tonight.

But an offensive against the British isles must await dissolution of British, French and Belgian forces—between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men—now trapped to the north of the German salient to the English channel, said an authoritative report on the gigantic struggle in the west.

Boulogne, a city of 50,000, lies only twenty-six miles by channel steamer from Folkestone, England, and 105 miles by water—85 by air—from London.

The Boulogne-Folkestone route was the only one regularly available to civilian traffic between France and England since the start of the war.

German advance forces had been stabbing toward Boulogne since Tuesday when they reached Abbeville, forty-five miles to the southeast.

(British Prime Minister Churchill admitted before the House of Commons today that heavy fighting was under way near Boulogne, that Abbeville was in German hands and that British communications were endangered.)

Head for Calais

Other German forces crawled northward along the channel coast, heading toward Calais, another vital port, seeking to close a ring of men and steel around the cutoff Allied legions.

Belgian Seaport Surrendered To Prevent Bloodshed

By LOUIS LOCHNER

WITH THE GERMAN WESTERN ARMIES, May 24 (Friday)—Antwerp, the important Belgian seaport and commercial center, surrendered to German forces in a typical d'etat in which the garrisons of two fortifications were surprised and overpowered, it was disclosed to news correspondents today on a tour of the front.

Antwerp's burgomaster thereupon regarded further bloodshed as useless, and ceremoniously handed the city's keys over to the German commander three days ago.

Time bombs, set by the Belgians, blew up in the tunnel under the Scheldt river, however, after the Germans had moved in.

The tunnel would correspond to the Holland tunnel under the Hudson riverd at New York. Otherwise the city was not greatly damaged.

Steel Industry Acts To Handle Defense Products

Walter S. Tower Heads Group of Manufacturers

NEW YORK, May 23. (AP)—The nation's $5,000,000,000 iron and steel industry, in a quick move to gear itself to the job of handling requirements for the government's giant war defense program, today put a full-time salaried president at the helm of the American Iron & Steel institute, its national trade association.

Walter S. Tower, institute executive secretary since 1933, was unanimously named president succeeding Ernest T. Weir, chairman of National Steel Corp.

Tower will be the first salaried institute president. Hitherto heads of the institute have been executives of member steel companies.

Tower has been associated with the steel industry since 1919, except for three years just shortly after the World war when he was commercial attache for the United States Department of Commerce at the American embassy at London. He was first associated with the industry with Consolidated Steel Corp., and later he was connected with Bethlehem Steel Co.

Membership of the institute at its 49th general meeting here today heard retiring President Weir voice stout opposition to entanglement of the United States in the European war.

"Despite overwhelming pro - Ally sympathy," he declared, "there is no indication that our public would sanction our participation in the war."

But he told the 1,000 steel men the "ruthlessness" of the war's "instigators has impressed upon the necessity of thorough preparation for defense," and added:

"It is inexcusable that we are not better prepared at this moment. If competent observers may be believed—and I, for one, think they may—this nation could be another Finland or Norway if it were not for the barriers of ocean and distance."

Industrialists Pledge Support Of Defense Plans

Leaders Tell Roosevelt They Will Back His Program

HITLER ASSAILED IN SPEECH BY SEN. PEPPER

Florida Member Wants U. S. To Furnish Money and Planes

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 23—Prominent industrialists pledged President Roosevelt their utmost cooperation in pushing through the huge defense program today, while the Senate heard an appeal that Adolf Hitler be told that American resources are dedicated "to his destruction as a force in the affairs of decent men."

During the day, with a unanimity born of fateful times, the Senate approved an appropriation of $1,473,756,728 for the navy and its air force by a vote of 78 to 0. At the same time officials adopted plans for applying America's mass production talents and technique to the production of fighting planes and engines.

From the White House came word that Mr. Roosevelt would give the nation on Sunday night a "straightforward and factual report" on the progress of his defense plans. Broadcast at 9:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, by three nationwide chains, it will be the president's first radio "fireside chat" since the opening days of the war.

Pledge Full Support

The pledge of the industrialists was taken to the White House by the commerce department's business advisory council, a group of more than fifty representing a cross-section of American industry. They presented a resolution saying that "business recognizes the need for complete unity in the cooperation of all of our country's vital forces and unanimously pledges its full aid to this end."

Members of the council talked with the president for nearly an hour in a discussion which touched upon such matters as plant expansion to meet defense needs, keeping living costs to a minimum and expediting the manufacture of munitions and planes.

Wants U. S. To Aid Allies

At the capitol Senator Pepper (D-Fla) urged that the United States attempt to swing the tide of battle in favor of the Allies at once, by sending money, goods, planes and arms for their use.

This country, he told his colleagues, should "tell Hitler and Hitlerism that we are his eternal and immortal enemies and that he shall be destroyed as a political force."

If the United States contents itself with merely attending to its own protection, Pepper said, "we will have committed one of the greatest tragedies in history."

The possibility of a coalition cabinet being formed at this time to push the defense program dwindled further, meanwhile.

NAZIS CUT SWATH OF DESTRUCTION TO CHANNEL

Shaded area shows territory which the German High Command claims has been occupied by the Nazi army. The French army, however, claimed that Arras has been recaptured by the Allies, indicating that the long-promised counter-offensive has begun in an effort to free the vast Allied army trapped north of the Somme. Germany rained incendiary bombs on Calais and other channel ports and cities of northeast France. Parachute troops were dropped in large numbers with orders to set afire all strategic points. England, only 22 miles from Calais, grimly awaited invasion.

Britain Prepares For Invasion by Advancing Nazis

Government Sees Danger from Ireland as Well as France

LONDON, May 23 (AP)—Menaced from two sides and facing a threat from within, Britain steeled herself tonight against possible invasion from the beloved chalk cliffs of Dover to the shores of Ireland.

It is a task incomparably greater than the historic stands against Napoleon and the Spanish armada.

Across the English channel the ports shook with the thunder of German guns. The German army stands where it never stood before.

To the west, the government admitted it was "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion of Britain through Ireland.

Hit Fifth Columnists

At home the government struck quickly and decisively against possible "fifth column" threats. Numerous raids and arrests were made. Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, and Capt. Archibald Ramsay, Conservative member of parliament were among those arrested.

Mosley's "British Union" was put under police control, his town and country houses raided, and his lieutenants imprisoned in the interests of security.

Parliament decreed the death penalty for traitors.

Newspapers and street conversations alike reflected a feeling of tensity and frustration not evident since the Germans swept toward Paris in the World War.

A tendency to accept a theory that the government is gravely worried and might be announcing less than it knows marked the gloom for the average citizen.

The most immediate threat appeared to be across the channel, where German officers on the hills above Boulogne trained their glasses on the white cliffs of England.

Germans Advancing

All reports indicated the Nazi iron cavalry is smashing its way with precision through the thinned and weary ranks of the British expeditionary forces and pounding at the outer gates of England at Boulogne, across the channel.

Behind the German advance legions, more tanks and armored cars are reported leading long gray columns through the gap at Audenarde toward Ostend and Seebrugge, also vital channel ports.

Air raid warnings in quick succession sent residents scurrying to cover in three east Kent towns tonight as German fliers feinted once more at Britain's east coast.

Sirens screamed for nearly an hour while flights of British fighter planes swarmed seaward. High flying aircraft were heard and in al-

Airmail Pick-up Service Sought For Seven States

Advocates Hope To Provide It for More Than 200 Towns

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Representatives from seven states today a drive to provide pick-up, non-stop airmail service for more than 200 towns on a permanent basis.

They arranged a meeting for Monday night (May 27) at which Representative Edmiston (D-WVa), leader of the movement, said plans for speeding congressional authority for the pick-up service would be discussed.

Nearly fifty senators and representatives, Edmiston said, had been asked to attend the conference. They will represent districts in Pennsylvania, Delaware, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky, in which all-American Aviation, Inc., seeks authority to operate.

Mail service, with planes picking up, without halting, airmail packages suspended on wires between two towers, was provided for a year in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Ohio under an experimental program approved by Congress.

That experimental authorization has expired, however, and the post-office department found it was without authority to make contracts for continued service unless Congress approved the system.

Hoover Appeals To Americans To Save Democracy

Former President Addresses Boys' Clubs of America

BOSTON, May 23. (AP) — Former President Herbert Hoover asserted tonight that "here in America is the last chance of making the system of liberty vital to men," and maintained that this country had the double duty of repairing democracy's failures and of constantly rebuilding it.

"These are grave days for the future of civilization and for our own country," he said in an address prepared for the annual meeting of the boys' clubs of America, an organization which he serves as chairman of its board of directors.

"Our minds," Hoover declared, "are distracted by the infinite tragedies which unroll day by day. That the independence of peaceful nations should be murdered fires our indignation. That women and children should be ruthlessly slaughtered brings us to tears."

Earlier today, Hoover told his press conference that a Democratic president had both the right and the opportunity to obtain the views

Twin Counter Attacks Crack German Salient In the Somme Sector

French Reach Suburbs of Amiens and British and French Forces Launch Drive Near Cambrai; Third Great Battle in Progress along the Aisne River; Calais Reported in Danger

By The Associated Press

The Allies in fierce twin counter attacks from the north and south blasted dents in the German salient to the English channel last (Thur.) night, imperilling the lightly-held Nazi spearhead pointed at the heart of Great Britain.

The giant Allied pincer movement dented the German salient between the Somme and Flanders, where only thin lines of Nazi armored columns are matched against the French, British and Belgian attackers.

A French attack cracked the salient and reached the suburbs of Amiens from the south.

The French northward push in the Amiens area was matched by a southward Allied drive some forty-five miles to the northeast. The Allied troops here reached the outskirts of Cambrai in a coordinated effort to chop off the Nazi wedge on both its top and bottom sides.

The French northern army aided by British and French forces carried the fighting from the north, between Cambrai and Valenciennes.

Third Great Battle Raging

A third great battle was in progress some 110 miles to the east, along the Aisne river, in the Attigny sector, southwest of Sedan, where the French reported the repulse of a German attack in the southeastern corner of the broadened German salient. This Nazi thrust was designed to flank the main Maginot line defenses.

The attacks at Amiens and Cambrai were aimed at light German forces holding the spearhead which runs through Abbeville, on the Somme river estuary twelve miles from the channel, and is threatening the Dover straits ports of Boulogne and Calais.

Calais in Danger

Despite the Allied successes British minister of information Alfred Duff Cooper gravely told Britons that Calais, only twenty-two miles from the British coast, "even now" may be in immediate danger.

The British air ministry credited a lone bomber with placing four accurately aimed bombs which blasted a German munitions train from the rails at Geldern, Germany, near the Dutch border, during a night of Allied air raids on the Germans' front and rear which penetrated as deep as Leipzig, where an important power station was blown up.

Wave after wave of British bombers and fighters participated in a 6½ hour attack climaxed by the bombing of a German armored division headquarters. Most of the 100 high explosive bombs dropped were reported to have exploded "well within the target area."

Here is how the situation shaped up last last night:

The Allied front ran from Belgium south along the Scheldt river to Valenciennes, where the Allies reported the German salient broken.

From there it goes southwest to Cambrai, where the French cracked the salient from the north, then west toward Arras and southwest

Red Cross Soon To Send Relief Supplies Abroad

"Mercy Ship" Will Leave New York about June 1

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The first "mercy ship" the Red Cross has sent abroad since 1914 will be loaded immediately with a million dollars worth of relief supplies at Jersey City and will sail about June 1 for Bordeaux, France.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, made this announcement today. He said the maritime commission had agreed to make available either the Artegas or the McKeesport, government-owned craft.

Davis said it was decided to send the ship quickly because of the desperate condition of "at least 5,000,000 refugees streaming towards southern France from the northern part of the country, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg."

The supplies will include clothes, drugs, soap, cooking utensils, gauze and a wide variety of food stuffs. There also will be 100 hospital trucks.

Three Red Cross executives will leave Sunday by clipper plane for France to be there to meet the boat when it docks. They are Richard F. Allen, a native of Craig, Mo., now in New York, and two assistants, Paul Thorne and William Giblin. Thorne is a native of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Giblin is a resident of Dorchester, Mass.

Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Red Cross delegate to Europe, cabled today a story of pathetic scenes he witnessed as the tide of refugees rolled into Paris.

Justice Department Asks for Tips On Moves of "Fifth Columnists"

WASHINGTON, May 22. (AP)—The Justice department suggested tonight that the nation's citizens send in any tips they may have about "fifth columns."

Meanwhile a special House committee, acting with unprecedented speed, cleared the way for congressional approval of President Roosevelt's plan to shift the immigration service from the Labor department to the Justice department, so that authorities may "deal quickly" with spies and saboteurs.

By unanimous vote of both Democratic and Republican committeemen, it sent to the House floor an unusual resolution which, upon congressional approval and the president's signature, would make his fifth government reorganization program effective in ten days.

From Senator Byrd (D.-Va) came a statement demanding "drastic" legislation compelling aliens to be fingerprinted and registered so that "America may be purged of every alien and foreign influence attempting to undermine and destroy our system of government."

The request of help against "fifth columns" was made by Attorney General Jackson, who told reporters at a press conference that while subversive activities could not be dealt with on a local or voluntary organization basis, citizens could aid by reporting to the Federal Bureau of Investigation "acts, threats or evidence of sabotage, espionage or other disloyal activities."

He also appealed to all citizens to refuse to join any organization until they knew the sources of its funds and who its backers were.

The attorney general indicated that the FBI may be enlarged to combat subversive activities. He said President Roosevelt had made ready many months ago to meet "fifth column" inroads and that the FBI has "capably, zealously and effectively carried out its task."

Waves of British Bombers Attack Nazis in Mighty Air Offensive

LONDON, May 23 (AP) — Wave after wave of British bombers and fighter planes, flung at the Germans' front and rear in one of the mightiest aerial offensives of the war, were credited tonight with bombing a Nazi armored division headquarters and striking military objectives as deep as Leipzig in Germany.

Other British pilots back from a day and night of war overhead told of smashing communications lines and blowing of German ammunition train and two supply trains off their tracks.

Three successive communiques described successes of daring Royal Air Force raids. The British claimed damage or destruction of more than forty German warplanes and said five of their own failed to return.

Air Marshal Joubert De Le Ferte said in a radio broadcast that Allied "bomber losses have been made up" and although a number of fighter planes have been lost "the losses in trained pilots was not severe and also had been made up."

He added that it was impossible for Germans to "go producing trained crews at the rate at which they have been lost in recent fighting."

While bombers pounded and strafed German reserves and tank columns moving up through Belgium and northern France, at least one flight was reported to have pierced to the heart of Germany. It struck at a power station near Leipzig — 300 miles from Germany's western frontier and almost directly south of Berlin.

Returning pilots were quoted as telling of bitter air fighting over the ground battleline, wrecking rail and road bridges vital to German communications, blasting lorries and tanks, dropping "close on to 100 high explosive bombs" on a nazi armored division headquarters.

The raids started late yesterday, and continued last night and today.

BOSTON, May 23. (AP) — Former President Herbert Hoover asserted tonight that "here in America is the last chance of making the system of liberty vital to men," and maintained that this country had the double duty of repairing democracy's failures and of constantly rebuilding it.

"These are grave days for the future of civilization and for our own country," he said in an address prepared for the annual meeting of the boys' clubs of America, an organization which he serves as chairman of its board of directors.

"Our minds," Hoover declared, "are distracted by the infinite tragedies which unroll day by day. That the independence of peaceful nations should be murdered fires our indignation. That women and children should be ruthlessly slaughtered brings us to tears."

Earlier today, Hoover told his press conference that a Democratic president had both the right and the opportunity to obtain the views

Red Cross Soon To Send Relief Supplies Abroad

"Mercy Ship" Will Leave New York about June 1

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The first "mercy ship" the Red Cross has sent abroad since 1914 will be loaded immediately with a million dollars worth of relief supplies at Jersey City and will sail about June 1 for Bordeaux, France.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, made this announcement today. He said the maritime commission had agreed to make available either the Artegas or the McKeesport, government-owned craft.

Davis said it was decided to send the ship quickly because of the desperate condition of "at least 5,000,000 refugees streaming towards southern France from the northern part of the country, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg."

The supplies will include clothes, drugs, soap, cooking utensils, gauze and a wide variety of food stuffs. There also will be 100 hospital trucks.

Three Red Cross executives will leave Sunday by clipper plane for France to be there to meet the boat when it docks. They are Richard F. Allen, a native of Craig, Mo., now in New York, and two assistants, Paul Thorne and William Giblin. Thorne is a native of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Giblin is a resident of Dorchester, Mass.

Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Red Cross delegate to Europe, cabled today a story of pathetic scenes he witnessed as the tide of refugees rolled into Paris.

Justice Department Asks for Tips On Moves of "Fifth Columnists"

WASHINGTON, May 22, (AP)—The Justice department suggested tonight that the nation's citizens send in any tips they may have about "fifth columns."

Meanwhile a special House committee, acting with unprecedented speed, cleared the way for congressional approval of President Roosevelt's plan to shift the immigration service from the Labor department to the Justice department, so that authorities may "deal quickly" with spies and saboteurs.

By unanimous vote of both Democratic and Republican committeemen, it sent to the House floor an unusual resolution which, upon congressional approval and the president's signature, would make his fifth government reorganization program effective in ten days.

From Senator Byrd (D.-Va) came a statement demanding "drastic" legislation compelling aliens to be fingerprinted and registered so that "America may be purged of every alien and foreign influence attempting to undermine and destroy our system of government."

The request of help against "fifth columns" was made by Attorney General Jackson, who told reporters at a press conference that while subversive activities could not be dealt with on a local or voluntary organization basis, citizens could aid by reporting to the Federal Bureau of Investigation "acts, threats or evidence of sabotage, espionage or other disloyal activities."

He also appealed to all citizens to refuse to join any organization until they knew the sources of its funds and who its backers were.

The attorney general indicated that the FBI may be enlarged to combat subversive activities. He said President Roosevelt had made ready many months ago to meet "fifth column" inroads and that the FBI has "capably, zealously and effectively carried out its task."

Waves of British Bombers Attack Nazis in Mighty Air Offensive

LONDON, May 23 (AP) — Wave after wave of British bombers and fighter planes, flung at the Germans' front and rear in one of the mightiest aerial offensives of the war, were credited tonight with bombing a Nazi armored division headquarters and striking military objectives as deep as Leipzig in Germany.

Other British pilots back from a day and night of war overhead told of smashing communications lines and blowing of German ammunition train and two supply trains off their tracks.

Three successive communiques described successes of daring Royal Air Force raids. The British claimed damage or destruction of more than forty German warplanes and said five of their own failed to return.

Air Marshal Joubert De Le Ferte said in a radio broadcast that Allied "bomber losses have been made up" and although a number of fighter planes have been lost "the losses in trained pilots was not severe and also had been made up."

He added that it was impossible for Germans to "go producing trained crews at the rate at which they have been lost in recent fighting."

While bombers pounded and strafed German reserves and tank columns moving up through Belgium and northern France, at least one flight was reported to have pierced to the heart of Germany. It struck at a power station near Leipzig — 300 miles from Germany's western frontier and almost directly south of Berlin.

Returning pilots were quoted as telling of bitter air fighting over the ground battleline, wrecking rail and road bridges vital to German communications, blasting lorries and tanks, dropping "close on to 100 high explosive bombs" on a nazi armored division headquarters.

The raids started late yesterday, and continued last night and today.

Germans Lash Savagely at Attacking Force in Flanders

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

PARIS, May 23 (AP)—In a double counter-offensive on the Somme and Flanders fronts the Allies rallied tonight against the Nazi march to the sea, denting on top and bottom the German salient which extends across France like a pistol leveled at Britain.

The central forces, in a furious push northward on the Somme, reported they had reached their first objective—German-held Amiens.

The northern army, meanwhile, had fought its way southward to the outskirts of Cambrai in Flanders fields.

The German salient, jutting west to the channel, thus seemed to be imperilled by an Allied pincer movement from north to south.

Only a thin line of German armored columns extended between the northern and central Allied forces through the hole broken between Flandrs and the Somme.

The French military spokesman acknowledged, however, that through this hole additional German units had filtered today in the direction of the sea.

Battle in Flanders

On the northern side of the salient, in Flanders, a pitched battle raged tonight with the Germans lashing back savagely at the Allied offensive.

Of the details of the fierce struggle on the southern side, little could be learned beyond the fact that the Germans had been pushed back at Amiens.

Amiens earlier had been reported held by only 5,000 Germans.

The Nazis, striving to divert pressure from their spearhead, attack during the afternoon in the Attigny sector to the east but tonight's communique declared this assault already had failed.

This was the third great scene of battle—an offensive loosed by the Germans in the southeastern corner of their gouge into France, near where the Maginot line is hinged to the lighter, northwesterly fortifications.

Dover Straits Menaced

The French thrust against Amiens, which has been held by light German forces, was aimed at the southern side of the spearhead made by earlier German successes. This spearhead lances to the sea, menacing the Dover straits ports of Boulogne and Calais.

The easterly German attack on the Aisne was to the south of the point where the Maginot line joins its now-pierced northwestern section, and was an action to cut behind the mighty fortifications.

The action about Cambrai and Valenciennes — a twenty-five-mile line roaring with flame—was the first taken by the Allies in an effort to bring two isolataed forces together.

The German assault on the Aisne was preceded by the thunder of heavy artillery. It was in this area —about 100 miles northeast of Paris on the south side of the river — where the French took their stand after the Germans struck through their northern defense in the battle of the Meuse.

Here was the new and enlarged front as it was described tonight by the war ministry's spokesman:

It ran from Belgium south along the Sheldt river, to Valenciennes. From there it turned southwest to Cambria and west toward Arras and then southwest, cutting the Arras-Bapaume highway.

Then it dropped across the German wedge to the Somme river and ran east along the somme and Aisne to Montmedy, forming, really, a second front.

Mastery of Channel at Stake

The northern battle of Flanders—on ground where men fell by the tragic thousands a generation ago—roared on for a priceless stake—mastery of the English channel.

The allied forces there—part of a great body said by the Germans to aggregate from 500,000 to 1,000,000 which had been surrounded in the ring made by the earlier German advances — struggled on in sight of the Scheldt river.

Still another French force was moving up from the south to try to join them. This force left its stabilized line in the region of Laon and was fighting its way from the region St. Quentin, scarcely twenty-five miles away. Liason would pinch off the Nazi spearhead near its base.

Where Flanders fields run into Belgium the Nazis hurled great tanks and dive bombers in several attacks across the Scheldt. They were reported first to have pierced the British lines at Audenarde but later Belgian advices said the lines had been closed again and the Nazis repulsed.

Nazi Parachutist Carries a Bicycle

ROUEN, France, May 23. (AP)—A German parachutist, carrying a bicycle and incendiary equipment, was reported captured tonight after he landed in the Gournay region near Rouen, south of the Somme, on a mission of spreading fire behind the Allied lines.

He said he had been ordered to mingle with Belgian refugees and set fires wherever he could. Originally of Belgian nationality, the man was recruited by the German army last April.

glian port directly across from England.

At the same time General Walther von Richenau is pushing toward Calais and Dunkerque, two French ports opposite England, one of Kuechlin's adjutants explained.

Although a hot battle was raging only a few miles away, Kuechlen found time to receive me.

"A stern battle is on at Ghent," he said simply.

Allies Fight Bravely

"But we are cutting our way to the sea and expect to be there shortly. Our enemies are resisting bravely."

"In addition we have inundations and other difficulties of terrain to contend with," Kuechlen added.

"Nevertheless the odds are greatly in our favor. Our task of the moment is to get the Ghent canal in our hands. That will happen shortly."

Only thirty minutes—as a Messerschmitt flies—separater me today from England. I stood at an airport facing England across the water (location not revealable) for the first time since entering the western zone of operations.

Stukas (dive bombers) and heavy bombers were roaring over out heads constantly.

Sees Planes Take Off

Our particular airport had neither heavy bombers nor stukas. It was reserved for Messerschmitt pursuit planes, of which twenty-seven frieged the airfield, artillery camouflaged by twigs and the tops of trees. The commander of this squadron is Herman Handrick, winner of the 1936 Olympic decathlon.

Even as we greeted Handrick, eight of his Messerschmitts took to the air and were out of sight in a jiffy.

"These eight planes have started to assist in the land fight," Handrick explained.

"Each plane has either four machineguns or two cannon. They have orders to swoop down on marching enemy columns."

For the first time since moving about in the operations area, we have seen naval officers darting back and forth in speedy cars.

Antwerp Little Damaged

Antwerp on the whole is but little damaged, but time bombs blew up even after the Germans had moved into what was Antwerp's pride, the Scheldt tunnel, an engineering marvel leading under the Scheldt river. In other words, it was the Hudson tunnel of Belgium.

A big bridge across the Scheldt was dynamited by the Belgians before they retreated.

To construct an emergency pontoon bridge the Germans had to take account of the fact that two changes of the tide and ebb daily made the difference fifteen feet. This presented an engineering problm of the first magnitude.

It was solved by a device of windlasses at both ends which first wind supports of the pontoons at either end up and down as the water rises or falls.

The feat was all the more remarkable because it had to be accomplished in the midst of shellfire of the enemy. German army engineers regard this as an unprecedented achievement.

Our travels on the front were delayed for hours when the military road over which we were motoring was the object of an apparent attempted bombing.

Our cars were forced to take cover while the bomber crisscrossed the road in an atempt to locate it, and then dropped parachute flares right to our left.

Immediately, however, German searchlights caught him and anti-aircraft guns boomed.

Without dropping bombs, he disappeared. Later we heard bombs had dropped at Aachen, in Germany, near the Belgian frontier, but without any damage being done.

The air activity, however, meant that all cars on the crowded military road had to drive in complete darkness at a snail's pace.

Gen. Johnson Flays New Deal for Its "Blundering Defense Policies"

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson, giving the United States two years to prepare against invasion of the Wetsern hemisphere, declared today that "at the present pace and plan of preparing, we can't do it."

"I think we can get ready in time, but I warn you x x x we are never going to do it if we retain in power and responsibility the present inefficient incompetent and industry-hating New Deal organization and method," the former NRA administrator, now a newspaper columnist, told the National Association of Chain Drug Stores at the annual meeting.

"As more facts and the realization of their meaning appear," he continued, "the administration will fall on the sole issue of its blundering defense policies and attitudes of the current war alone, leaving aside their other impractical policies."

He severely criticized the administration for its "blundering ineptiture and bitterly unfair prejudice" in its treatment of business and said:

"Except for its drunken sailor spending, its cock-eyed fiscal irresponsibility, its absolute genius for putting crackpot incompetents in important jobs, it is not the principles of the new deal to which busines objects or ever has objected.

"It is the reckless extremes to which their principles have been carried, the bitterly unfair prejudice and the blundering ineptitude with which they have been executed."

Regarding the possibility of Roosevelt's reelection for a third term, Johnson asserted that "more of the same extremes will come and declared:

Names "Needed" Candidates

"All that's needed for salvation is the election of men of the type of Garner, Willkie, Hull, Taft or Dewey.

"If any one of these men or a man like him is elected, the day after election you'll see the greatest exodus from Washington of impractical experiments, pink-fringed thinkers, political zanies and thimble riggers since the Pied Pieper tooted the rats out of Hamelin.

"Absolutely all we need is to be sure the idea of our government will be that private enterprise is not a suspicious or barly tolerated racket but the honorable living and employment of us all."

British Damage German Factories

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, May 23 (AP)—Direct hits on factories and blast furnaces in Germany were reported tonight by Royal Air Force bomber crews back from new raids deep behind the battlelines.

Raids were aimed at supply sources and communication lines over which Nazi reserves are moving up to help consolidate positions seized by fast-striking advance units.

Most targets were in the Ardennes mountain section of southeastern Belgium, through which Germany aimed its first thrusts into France, and in the city of Saarburg, just across the German frontier from occupied Luxembourg.

Although visibility was bad, considerable damage was reported on important roads and railway junctions.

Proceeding east over Luxembourg and into Germany, other RAF bombers, attacking military objectives in industrial Saarburg, reported scoring direct hits.

"Mein Kampf" Warned World against Hitler

CINCINNATI, May 23 (AP)—The lives of millions of young men dying in Flanders might have been saved if "Mein Kampf," written by Adolf Hitler, had been properly interpreted ten years ago.

Alfred Korzybski of Chicago told the American Psychiatric Association today that a scientific reading of Hitler's "Bible of Babel" revealed, on its publication, the workings of a pathological mind which would stop at nothing.

"If politicians had turned over Mein Kampf to a group of psychiatric experts several years ago with orders to study it," he declared, "they would have received a report that a sick man was getting into a position of world power, and could have predicted the consequences and made ready for them."

The situation which has developed in recent years was one which medical diagnosticians could have analyzed and not one for politicians to toy with, Korzybski declared.

Radicals Barred From Relief Jobs

House Passes Bill as Requested by the President

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—A $1,111,754,916 relief bill revised to meet President Roosevelt's requests and to prevent employment of aliens, Communists and Nazi bund members was passed by the House tonight and sent to the Senate.

The rollcall vote was announced as 354 to 21.

With the Democratic majority in full command, the members approved the president's recommendation for a $975,650,000 WPA fund with permission for him to use it in eight months beginning July 1, rather than to stretch it over the full 12-month period.

The House also endorsed his request for elimination of restrictions against use of WPA funds on big construction projects. The deleted sections provided that no federal building, bridge, stadium or other structure could be erected with WPA funds if the total cost exceeded $50,000 and that the WPA contribution to non-federal projects must be limited to the same amount.

Mindful of reports of the effectiveness of fifth columns abroad, the members accepted without debate an amendment by Representative Walter (D-Pa) to broaden the prohibition against employment of aliens to include Communists and members o Nazi bund groups.

A little later, Representative Rich (R-Pa) successfully sponsored an amendment to include in the restrictions any person who advocated the overthrow of the government.

The bill carries, in addition to the WPA fund, $115,000,000 for rural rehabilitation, $3,500,000 for the Puerto Rico reconstruction administration, $1,700,000 for the Indian service, $500,000 for the office of government reports in the president's office, and more than $15,000,000 for administrative expenses of agencies which handle relief.

B. & O. Employes Ask For 30-Hour Week

Pittsburgh, May 23 (AP)—Resolutions urging thirty-hour work week instead of the present forty hours and vacations with pay were adopted today at a convention of seven American Federation of Labor unions of Baltimore and Ohio railroad employes.

H. J. Doyle, of Baltimore who was reelected president of the system No. 3 convention, said that 86 delegates representing 11,000 employes at all points on the B. & O. system, were present.

A. J. Barnhart of Toledo, O., was renamed vice president of the group that includes machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, electrical workers, firemen, oilers, car men, and sheet metal workers.

"We want the shorter work week to help in reducing unemployment," Doyle said. "Our request to the management for this will be presented soon. We expect a favorable answer."

One of the seven AFL shop crafts, the International Association of Machinists, District Lodge 29, which held a preliminary meeting earlier, reelected William Adams of Cincinnati, as president and P. J. Morgan of Grafton, W. Va., as vice president.

solidate sufficient strength to break through the German barrier-salient they might turn the tables on the German channel forces.

Power-diving Stuka bombers and wasp-like torpedo speedboats collaborated in smashes at the Allies' rearguard, blasting at transports, supply ships and warcraft in the channel.

The German high command reported its air force had "effectually bombed" the "harbor facilities" of Dunkerque on the French side of the channel and Dover on the English side. (The British denied Dover had been bombed.)

Three transports and a tanker, totaling 20,000 tons, and one destroyer were said to have been "heavily damaged" yesterday while German motor torpedoboats sank an Allied destroyer off Dunkerque.

May Cut Communications

The aim of these attacks was to paralyze all communications between the British isles and the encircled troops.

On the northern jaw of the vise which the Reich's armies of the west were screwing up on the entrapped Allied forces, slow gains were reported, with German forces shoving across the Scheldt river against heavy enemy resistance.

(The British acknowledged a German crossing of the Scheldt in at least one place.)

That, roughly, is the situation after fourteen days of German attack in which the Netherlands has been engulfed and the Allied forces rolled back over the plains of Belgium and northern France.

The threat to Paris appeared to be adjourned. However, there were reports that one German force, a tentacle of the surge into northwestern France, was aimed at Compiegne, some forty miles northeast of the French capital. There the Germans hoped to wipe out in victory the bitter memory of the World War armistics, signed in a wood near Compiegne.

There emerged signs of an imminent offensive against England herself—notably the attacks by land, sea and air on and along the channel—and DNB official German news agency, commented that "the battle is constantly being fought closer to Britain."

Must Occupy Pocket

But first, DNB added, "the pocket in the north of France and Belgian coastal area must be completely occupied by German troops. In view of the strong forces encircled there it will not be done without heavy fighting."

German authorities ridiculed Allied assertions that at least 500,000 Germans had been lost in the westward drive since it started, declaring that "in the light of successes and expectations of the German leadership, our casualties are small.

While the armored units move forward along the channel coast toward Calais, taking advantage of the natural protection afforded by the coast, German military experts said, it is likely that the remainder of the "encirclement front" will remain more or less at a standstill, so far as the Germans are concerned.

Voters To Pass On Fisheries Commission

Annapolis, Md., May 22. (AP)—The Court of Appeals has held that the 1939 legislative bill creating the commission of fisheries is referable to voters in the coming election under the referendum amendment to the state constitution.

The conservation case was brought to the appellate court by State Senator Philip Dorsey, Jr., of St. Mary's county; J. Wesley Kelley, of Cumberland, and Delegate Albert W. Woodfield, of Anne Arundel county, who sought a writ of mandamus to stop Secretary of State Francis Petrott from placing the measure on the ballot.

The last legislature passed two conservation bills aimed at abolishing the present conservation commission. The one creating the state game and inland fish commission went into effect last June 1, but petitions for a referendum on the commission of fisheries bill stayed its operation. As a consequence, the State Conservation Commission still has jurisdiction over tidewaters.

Hugh M. Frampton and Benjamin Michaelson, attorneys for the complainants, contend that the bill in question was an appropriation measure and therefore was not referable to the voters. Dorsey and Woodfield were active in obtaining the passage of the measure in the legislature.

Johnson Urges United America

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said tonight that the twin dangers of either "standing idly by" or "rushing madly" into the war could be avoided by a strong course—the consolidation of "strong and united America."

"—So strong on land, on sea and in the air that no marauding nation will dare risk batle with us and so united in spirit and in good will that no international buccaneer will undermine our institutions or loot our possessions," he told the annual meeting of the national board of fire underwriters.

He cited as lessons of the war so far from which the United States could derive guidance:

1. "That the will to peace, unsupported by adequate national defense, is a certain way to invite war. Holland wanted peace. Belgium wanted peace. Denmark wanted peace. . . ."

2. "That the present war already has jumped the Atlantic ocean. Greenland is America. Denmark, its erstwhile owner, has lost her sovereignty. The Dutch West Indies are in the western hemisphere. Holland, their owner, is fighting for her life."

3. That war has "a new technique"—the "fifth column." "We must be on the alert for any manifestations of un-Americanism in any form, not only in the United States, but in every one of our American republics."

For the first time since moving about in the operations area, we have seen naval officers darting back and forth in speedy cars.

Antwerp Little Damaged

Antwerp on the whole is but little damaged, but time bombs blew up even after the Germans had moved into what was Antwerp's pride, the Scheldt tunnel, an engineering marvel leading under the Scheldt river. In other words, it was the Hudson tunnel of Belgium.

A big bridge across the Scheldt was dynamited by the Belgians before they retreated.

To construct an emergency pontoon bridge the Germans had to take account of the fact that two changes of the tide and ebb daily made the difference fifteen feet. This presented an engineering problm of the first magnitude.

It was solved by a device of windlasses at both ends which first wind supports of the pontoons at either end up and down as the water rises or falls.

The feat was all the more remarkable because it had to be accomplished in the midst of shellfire of the enemy. German army engineers regard this as an unprecedented achievement.

Our travels on the front were delayed for hours when the military road over which we were motoring was the object of an apparent attempted bombing.

Our cars were forced to take cover while the bomber crisscrossed the road in an atempt to locate it, and then dropped parachute flares right to our left.

Immediately, however, German searchlights caught him and anti-aircraft guns boomed.

Without dropping bombs, he disappeared. Later we heard bombs had dropped at Aachen, in Germany, near the Belgian frontier, but without any damage being done.

The air activity, however, meant that all cars on the crowded military road had to drive in complete darkness at a snail's pace.

Gen. Johnson Flays New Deal for Its "Blundering Defense Policies"

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson, giving the United States two years to prepare against invasion of the Wetsern hemisphere, declared today that "at the present pace and plan of preparing, we can't do it."

"I think we can get ready in time, but I warn you x x x we are never going to do it if we retain in power and responsibility the present inefficient incompetent and industry-hating New Deal organization and method," the former NRA administrator, now a newspaper columnist, told the National Association of Chain Drug Stores at the annual meeting.

"As more facts and the realization of their meaning appear," he continued, "the administration will fall on the sole issue of its blundering defense policies and attitudes of the current war alone, leaving aside their other impractical policies."

He severely criticized the administration for its "blundering ineptiture and bitterly unfair prejudice" in its treatment of business and said:

"Except for its drunken sailor spending, its cock-eyed fiscal irresponsibility, its absolute genius for putting crackpot incompetents in important jobs, it is not the principles of the new deal to which business objects or ever has objected.

"It is the reckless extremes to which their principles have been carried, the bitterly unfair prejudice and the blundering ineptitude with which they have been executed."

Regarding the possibility of Roosevelt's reelection for a third term, Johnson asserted that "more of the same extremes will come and declared:

Names "Needed" Candidates

"All that's needed for salvation is the election of men of the type of Garner, Willkie, Hull, Taft or Dewey.

"If any one of these men or a man like him is elected, the day after election you'll see the greatest exodus from Washington of impractical experiments, pink-fringed thinkers, political zanies and thimble riggers since the Pied Pieper tooted the rats out of Hamelin.

"Absolutely all we need is to be sure the idea of our government will be that private enterprise is not a suspicious or barly tolerated racket but the honorable living and employment of us all."

British Damage German Factories

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, May 23 (AP)—Direct hits on factories and blast furnaces in Germany were reported tonight by Royal Air Force bomber crews back from new raids deep behind the battlelines.

Raids were aimed at supply sources and communication lines over which Nazi reserves are moving up to help consolidate positions seized by fast-striking advance units.

Most targets were in the Ardennes mountain section of southeastern Belgium, through which Germany aimed its first thrusts into France, and in the city of Saarburg, just across the German frontier from occupied Luxembourg.

Although visibility was bad, considerable damage was reported on important roads and railway junctions.

Proceeding east over Luxembourg and into Germany, other RAF bombers, attacking military objectives in industrial Saarburg, reported scoring direct hits.

"Mein Kampf" Warned World against Hitler

CINCINNATI, May 23 (AP)—The lives of millions of young men dying in Flanders might have been saved if "Mein Kampf," written by Adolf Hitler, had been properly interpreted ten years ago.

Alfred Korzybski of Chicago told the American Psychiatric Association today that a scientific reading of Hitler's "Bible of Babel" revealed, on its publication, the workings of a pathological mind which would stop at nothing.

"If politicians had turned over Mein Kampf to a group of psychiatric experts several years ago with orders to study it," he declared, "they would have received a report that a sick man was getting into a position of world power, and could have predicted the consequences and made ready for them."

The situation which has developed in recent years was one which medical diagnosticians could have analyzed and not one for politicians to toy with, Korzybski declared.

Night Ball Game Costs Fan $900

ATLANTA, May 23 (AP)—It's a sad, sad story, but the Figures tell it. Tuesday night a national radio program tried to telephone the residence of J. C. Figures in Birmingham to give him $1,000. The phone didn't answer because he had persuaded Mrs. Figures to go to the ball game between Birmingham and Atlanta, their first this season.

V. M. I. Athletes Name Three '41 Captains

LEXINGTON, Va., May 23 (AP)—Three outstanding athletes have been elected by V. M. I. lettermen to captain the 1941 cadet spring sports teams.

They were: Baseball, E. Frank Carney; track, Charles L. Rockwood, and tennis, Hugh R. Gantt.

Radicals Barred From Relief Jobs

House Passes Bill as Requested by the President

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—A $1,111,754,916 relief bill revised to meet President Roosevelt's requests and to prevent employment of aliens, Communists and Nazi bund members was passed by the House tonight and sent to the Senate.

The rollcall vote was announced as 354 to 21.

With the Democratic majority in full command, the members approved the president's recommendation for a $975,650,000 WPA fund with permission for him to use it in eight months beginning July 1, rather than to stretch it over the full 12-month period.

The House also endorsed his request for elimination of restrictions against use of WPA funds on big construction projects. The deleted sections provided that no federal building, bridge, stadium or other structure could be erected with WPA funds if the total cost exceeded $50,000 and that the WPA contribution to non-federal projects must be limited to the same amount.

Mindful of reports of the effectiveness of fifth columns abroad, the members accepted without debate an amendment by Representative Walter (D-Pa) to broaden the prohibition against employment of aliens to include Communists and members o Nazi bund groups.

A little later, Representative Rich (R-Pa) successfully sponsored an amendment to include in the restrictions any person who advocated the overthrow of the government.

The bill carries, in addition to the WPA fund, $115,000,000 for rural rehabilitation, $3,500,000 for the Puerto Rico reconstruction administration, $1,700,000 for the Indian service, $500,000 for the office of government reports in the president's office, and more than $15,000,000 for administrative expenses of agencies which handle relief.

solidate sufficient strength to break through the German barrier-salient they might turn the tables on the German channel forces.

Power-diving Stuka bombers and wasp-like torpedo speedboats collaborated in smashes at the Allies' rearguard, blasting at transports, supply ships and warcraft in the channel.

The German high command reported its air force had "effectually bombed" the "harbor facilities" of Dunkerque on the French side of the channel and Dover on the English side. (The British denied Dover had been bombed.)

Three transports and a tanker, totaling 20,000 tons, and one destroyer were said to have been "heavily damaged" yesterday while German motor torpedoboats sank an Allied destroyer off Dunkerque.

May Cut Communications

The aim of these attacks was to paralyze all communications between the British isles and the encircled troops.

On the northern jaw of the vise which the Reich's armies of the west were screwing up on the entrapped Allied forces, slow gains were reported, with German forces shoving across the Scheldt river against heavy enemy resistance.

(The British acknowledged a German crossing of the Scheldt in at least one place.)

That, roughly, is the situation after fourteen days of German attack in which the Netherlands has been engulfed and the Allied forces rolled back over the plains of Belgium and northern France.

The threat to Paris appeared to be adjourned. However, there were reports that one German force, a tentacle of the surge into northwestern France, was aimed at Compiegne, some forty miles northeast of the French capital. There the Germans hoped to wipe out in victory the bitter memory of the World War armistics, signed in a wood near Compiegne.

There emerged signs of an imminent offensive against England herself—notably the attacks by land, sea and air on and along the channel—and DNB official German news agency, commented that "the battle is constantly being fought closer to Britain."

Must Occupy Pocket

But first, DNB added, "the pocket in the north of France and Belgian coastal area must be completely occupied by German troops. In view of the strong forces encircled there it will not be done without heavy fighting."

German authorities ridiculed Allied assertions that at least 500,000 Germans had been lost in the westward drive since it started, declaring that "in the light of successes and expectations of the German leadership, our casualties are small.

While the armored units move forward along the channel coast toward Calais, taking advantage of the natural protection afforded by the coast, German military experts said, it is likely that the remainder of the "encirclement front" will remain more or less at a standstill, so far as the Germans are concerned.

B. & O. Employes Ask For 30-Hour Week

Pittsburgh, May 23 (AP)—Resolutions urging thirty-hour work week instead of the present forty hours and vacations with pay were adopted today at a convention of seven American Federation of Labor unions of Baltimore and Ohio railroad employes.

H. J. Doyle, of Baltimore who was reelected president of the system No. 3 convention, said that 86 delegates representing 11,000 employes at all points on the B. & O. system, were present.

A. J. Barnhart of Toledo, O., was renamed vice president of the group that includes machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, electrical workers, firemen, oilers, car men, and sheet metal workers.

"We want the shorter work week to help in reducing unemployment," Doyle said. "Our request to the management for this will be presented soon. We expect a favorable answer."

One of the seven AFL shop crafts, the International Association of Machinists, District Lodge 29, which held a preliminary meeting earlier, reelected William Adams of Cincinnati, as president and P. J. Morgan of Grafton, W. Va., as vice president.

Voters To Pass On Fisheries Commission

Annapolis, Md., May 22. (AP)—The Court of Appeals has held that the 1939 legislative bill creating the commission of fisheries is referable to voters in the coming election under the referendum amendment to the state constitution.

The conservation case was brought to the appellate court by State Senator Philip Dorsey, Jr., of St. Mary's county; J. Wesley Kelley, of Cumberland, and Delegate Albert W. Woodfield, of Anne Arundel county, who sought a writ of mandamus to stop Secretary of State Francis Petrott from placing the measure on the ballot.

The last legislature passed two conservation bills aimed at abolishing the present conservation commission. The one creating the state game and inland fish commission went into effect last June 1, but petitions for a referendum on the commission of fisheries bill stayed its operation. As a consequence, the State Conservation Commission still has jurisdiction over tidewaters.

Hugh M. Frampton and Benjamin Michaelson, attorneys for the complainants, contend that the bill in question was an appropriation measure and therefore was not referable to the voters. Dorsey and Woodfield were active in obtaining the passage of the measure in the legislature.

ITALIAN STUDENTS BURN ALLIED FLAGS

Italian students are shown as they carried a coffin, wrapped in French and British flags with an umbrella on top, which they burned May 14 in front of the British embassy in Rome to climax a wave of anti-Allied demonstrations. More recently the Italian press declared that Italy's "pact of steel" with Germany had held British warships in the Mediterranean and French soldiers on the Italian frontier while the Nazi war machine smashed through the low countries into France.

Johnson Urges United America

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said tonight that the twin dangers of either "standing idly by" or "rushing madly" into the war could be avoided by a strong course—the consolidation of "strong and united America."

"—So strong on land, on sea and in the air that no marauding nation will dare risk batle with us and so united in spirit and in good will that no international buccaneer will undermine our institutions or loot our possessions," he told the annual meeting of the national board of fire underwriters.

He cited as lessons of the war so far from which the United States could derive guidance:

1. "That the will to peace, unsupported by adequate national defense, is a certain way to invite war. Holland wanted peace. Belgium wanted peace. Denmark wanted peace. . . ."

2. "That the present war already has jumped the Atlantic ocean. Greenland is America. Denmark, its erstwhile owner, has lost her sovereignty. The Dutch West Indies are in the western hemisphere. Holland, their owner, is fighting for her life."

3. That war has "a new technique"—the "fifth column." "We must be on the alert for any manifestations of un-Americanism in any form, not only in the United States, but in every one of our American republics."

Prophecy and Leadership Are Different Things

IN his correspondence appearing today on this page, Mark Sullivan discusses the insight manifested during the last few years by President Roosevelt respecting the Second World war. It is true enough that on different occasions the president sensed the probability of an European war, and whatever credit is to be found therein is not to be denied, but it is equally beyond denial that the prophecy was not sustained by policy or action. The plain fact of the matter is that, as the New York Herald Tribune has pointed out, prophecy is not enough.

"The tragedy of Mr. Roosevelt's career," says the Herald Tribune, "was that, seeing the future and the issues thus clearly, he fell so far short of preparing his country to defend itself. By reason of a personal interest and affection he did much for the navy, and he deserves the gratitude of the country therefor. But the vital arm of aviation was gravely neglected. The army—especially in such critical items as anti-aircraft guns and mechanized forces—was all but ignored.

"As a result the nation finds itself today confronted by an imminent danger, and grossly unready to meet it, despite billions expended. Its president had the vision to see and predict but lacked the abilities and the interest to do the practical and efficient things needed to cope with it.

"It is stressing the obvious to note the parallel that lies between this anomaly in foreign policy and the failures of the New Deal at home. The country has had great and proper sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's vision in domestic affairs. His strongest opponents accept the desirability of many of his goals. It is in the field of practice that his administration has worst blundered. Every one has been converted to the ideal of 'security,' for example; but the country now perceives that the only possible base for any real security is a producing and prosperous nation. Similarly, with the bureaucracy which the New Deal has installed upon a socialistic scale. With his eyes fixed upon his goals, it never apparently occurred to the president that he was butchering the entire American way of living and governing in order to end a few abuses.

"There is no need to cite more facts. Precisely as the president foresaw the Second World war but lacked the practical ability to prepare the nation for its consequences, so in domestic concerns he has woefully been inadequate in translating ideal into performance.

"It is on this unarguable record that the head of the nation rests. The gift of prophecy is a great and important one. What President Roosevelt has done to open the eyes of the American people — whether they look overseas or at their domestic problems — has constituted an important public service. But henceforward the nation needs, in both fields, the leadership of an intensely practical mind. The task of arming swiftly calls for the highest industrial skill the nation possesses. To do so at a moment when the New Deal has bent the nation beneath a staggering $42,000,000,000 debt, raised public expenditures to a height which makes huge deficits inescapable, and, by crippling the nation's business held 10,000,000 workers permanently unemployed, constitutes the heaviest executive responsibility that any president has ever faced.

"Every business man, every industrialist, every American, regardless of his party politics, should help Mr. Roosevelt in any way that he is asked to in these difficult months. There must be a complete subordination of selfish or partisan aims in the nation's crisis. But next January a new president, steady, efficient, wise, should enter the White House. The hour of the prophet has passed."

Little need be added to what the Herald Tribune has here so bluntly but clearly expressed.

The New and Deadlier Weapons of War

APPALLING, indeed, is the power of destruction that has been developed in the European war with the use of new weapons and new methods of attack.

Recounting these new and deadlier weapons, far exceeding anything in their destructive power that the World war saw, an analysis by Louis F. Keemle, cable editor of the United Press, shows how co-ordination of smaller weapons of aggression have been used with telling effect by the Nazis.

The new war weapon that strikes the imagination most, Keemle's report shows, is the parachutist. The parachutist is a one-man army, who is dropped by airplane far to the enemy's rear for the purpose of sabotaging communications and paving the way for a general advance. A handful of them may be enabled to seize an entire town if it is undefended and unprepared.

The parachutist often carries a folding bicycle for rapid movement, and in some cases it is even a portable motorcycle. He is armed with a submachine gun and an automatic pistol. He carries field glasses, a gas mask, a portable radio, a water bottle, a camouflaged pup tent and, what is quite important for his mission, a map case with detailed charts of the countryside showing exactly where he is to go and what he is to do. He carries no food, being expected to forage for himself.

Then there are the motorcycle troops, an arm the Germans have been using with telling effect. Behind the parachutists they speed along to reinforce the advance thrust. Behind them come the tanks, then the main army mechanized and able to roll.

The larger weapons have been developed enormously, as the war news has disclosed, including the great dive bombers, the huge tanks, the magnetic mine, deadly menace to shipping, for which, however, the British are reported to have developed an electric belt that offsets it.

The significant phase of the development of weapons, however, lies in the remarkable co-ordination of the smaller new ones with the greater.

Thus far one other deadly weapon remains, which was used in the World war and not yet in this one, this being gas, Keemle notes. Nothing is known of what the Nazis may have concocted for use in this war, but likely they have invented something more frightful and in their ruthless, brutal course they can be expected to utilize it. They were reported to have put the strong Belgian fort of Eben Emael out of action by the use of a gas that paralyzed the gun crews, but that has been only a report.

One may well wonder, in view of the frightful destructiveness of new weapons of warfare how long, if ever, it will be until nations will be obliged to outlaw it and live at peace.

Farm Credit Measure Is Halted by Opposition

THANKS to the growing spirit of independence in Congress, the attempt of the New Deal administration to seize political control of all farm credit agencies has been shelved for this session, according to word from Washington. Determined opposition from farmers of the nation helped to bring this about.

While the president asked Congress to "reduce the surplus funds" of various farm credit agencies by $315,000,000, Secretary Wallace and his puppet chairman of the Farm Credit Administration pleaded for enactment of the Jones-Wheeler Bill, which would give political control of farm loans to the department of Agriculture.

The specious pleas of these bureau politicians fell on somewhat stony ground. Congress is impressed by the strong objections voiced by farm organizations. Farmers demand that they shall have a voice in the policy that spells life or death to farm ownership. They denounce the attempt to coerce them—through loans to save their farms—into compliance with the politico-socialist experiments of bureaucrats in the Wallace department.

No political party has ever yet dragooned the American farmer. No band of theorists has ever succeeded in robbing the farmer of his independence, financial or political. In this year 1940, when the discredited New Deal is on the way out, when farmers are demanding the square deal that has been denied them, it is a poor time for the president to ask Congress to strip farm credit agencies of their resources.

It is a poor time for the New Deal to ask Congress to place farmers under financial control so that they may be coerced into voting to give a new lease of life to their tormentors.

Giants at Large Forseen in Books

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

It would perhaps be well if we had a system for recording the runs, hits and errors of prophecy, as well as baseball. In these last ominous few days, I have been checking on our major and minor prophets of the last twenty-five years. Most of them were wrong; a few had a rough, general idea of what was going to happen; still fewer read the crystal ball like today's newspaper.

As above, it would seem sensible to pick the winning prophet, put him in the cabinet and make him national Secretary of Prophecy. Merlin had a job something like that, as did many other mediaeval seers and star-gazers. The idea is not novel in modern times. There's nothing more modern than Wall street. Witness how it goes for everything in this line from sun spots to the late Evangeline Adams, seeress, who read the ticker-tape of tomorrow. Perhaps our government is just an old stick-in-the-mud—an old fogy in congress gaiters and a beaver hat.

Quite Astonishing

Forgetting the mystery-mongers, it is quite astonishing the way a few thoughtful men have read the future since the shot at Sarajevo, which was perhaps the starting gun of new destiny. A few days ago we mentioned one Ernst Henri, writing a book in 1934, in which he noted that a man named Quisling was readying Norway for the German game bag, and predicting that the kill would come off as advertised. In telling what Hitler would do in the line of "scientific barbarization" of the world, he used the future tense, but he might just as well have used the past tense, and it would have been history today.

Today we cite two books by the late Thorstein Veblen, famous American economist. One is "Imperial Germany and the Industrial Revolution", published in 1915, and the other is "The Nature of Peace", published in 1917. Other economists and historians skirted around the idea of the fluxing of an archaic culture with the fiendish energies and instrumentalities of modern scientific warfare, but Veblen was the only one to hit it right on the nose.

In the above two books, his theme was that after the World war, Germany and Japan would be at large in the civilized world like the wicked giants, Gog and Magog, armed with machine guns instead of bludgeons. He predicted that they would revert to premediaeval culture and morality, going all the way back to the gods of the mountain top. Veblen died about the time the Nazis took up with Wotan.

Ironic Critic

Veblen looked like a preternaturally wise and bright-eyed little old prairie dog peeping out of his burrow and popping in again. He was pretty much of a hermit, an ironic critic of the tragedie humaine, and he imbedded his profound meditations in a mother lode of erudition from which it is sometimes difficult to blast out his definite meaning. But, run through the stamp mill, his views, as validated by today's newspapers, assay perhaps deeper discernment of the modern drift than those of any man of his time.

For example, he saw quite clearly that England's aversion to conveyor-belt production and her insistence on quality, rather than swift obsolescence, would be assessed against her in wartime—the wartime of today when Germans belch out planes to spend them quickly while England lags with her quality production.

The archaic morality of the German "dynastic state" is clearly and specifically analyzed as the sanction and driving force of the new barbaric aggression. Here is a key passage from "Imperial Germany":

Key Passage

"The German people have been enabled to take up the technological heritage of the English without having paid for it in the habits of thought, the use and wont, induced in the English community by the experience involved in achieving it. Modern technology has come to the Germans ready-made, without the cultural consequences which its gradual development and continued use have entailed among the people whose experience initiated it."

Barbaric Germany is a gate-crasher in the civilized world. Congress ought to read Thorstein Veblen as it shapes our new defense policies. One may say definitely that if the British government of the last nine years had been made to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the above two books England wouldn't have been hell's hole today.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE PROBLEM OF FINANCING

Denunciation in Place of Leadership By Executive Now Seen As Mistake

MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 23 — Politically, President Roosevelt is going to gain by the war development in Europe. He gains because, on this point, he had more foresight than most in America. For his rightness on one point, which turned out to be important and spectacular, he will gain more than this alone entitles him to. That always happens. Always a prophet who turns out to be right is given credit for more than he actually did. Upon him the imaginative public places an aura of oracular infallibility. Even more than that, the public, seeing him as a paragon of prophecy, promptly thinks of him as a paragon i nother respects. It is illogical; it frequently has unfortunate results. But it always happens.

Mark Sullivan

Mr. Roosevelt's foresight (on this point) is proved by four conspicious incidents:

Nearly three years ago, October 5, 1937, Mr. Roosevelt took notice of the aggression of Japan in China, of Italy in Ethiopia, and the preparations Germany was making. Without naming the nation, Mr. Roosevelt used the phrase "acts of aggression", and suggested "quarantine." The peace-loving nations," he said, "must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties. . . ."

At once, pacifists, isolationists, and political opponents charged that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to "involve us in other nations' wars."

Plane Buying Facilitated

Again, in January 1939, a new military plane, being tested in California, came down in a forced landing. Newsmen found that an occupant of the plane was a French military officer. This was told with a manner of sinister mystery uncovered. In a series of horrendous disclosures, it turned out that the French and British governments were buying planes in the United States. And that Mr. Roosevelt not only was aware, but had facilitated the transaction.

From this arose new denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt, almost hysterical suspicion. Not only was he interfering in a prospective war abroad, not only trying to make us an ally of France and Britain, he was attempting it furtively. So angry was the outcry that Mr. Roosevelt became obviously timorous, acted almost like a person caught in a crime. His explanation was apologetic.

Denounced As Lie

Again, in January 1939, Mr. Rooseveltl was quoted as saying, in a private talk with congresmen, that America's first line of defense is in France. While he did not really quite say that, something much like that expressed the spirit of his position. So great was the outcry against such a notion that Mr. Roosevelt, in self-defense, denounced the alleged statement as a "lie."

Again in August 1939, as Congress was about to adjourn, Mr. Roosevelt asked leladers to keep Congress in Washington, so as to revise the neutrality law, in a way which would give Britain and France opportunity to buy munitions in America. Mr. Roosevelt thought there would be a war before Congress met again in January. Senator Borah tartly replied that his information was there would be no war. Congress went home without acting on the neutrality law. Within a month, war came.

In these incidents, as it now turns out, Mr. Roosevelt was prophetically right, in the sense that he saw war was coming. So much, all must admit. Not all, but a large number, now thinks he was right in an additional sense. Probably a majority of Americans, in the light of what has now happened, wish we had joined in some movement to quarantine aggressors. They wish more planes had been sold to the British and French. They wish we had changed our neutrality law earlier, and changed it much farther than we did in the direction of being helpful to France and Britain. They see that if Mr. Roosevelt had used the actual words "America's first line of defense is in France," he would have been night — it was precisely on the day Germany entered France, that America recognized it must arm for defense.

Gestures Mild

Mr. Roosevelt's gestures toward intervention were mild. He never gave bold leadership to the idea. What made his gestures conspicious was the denunciation of his critics—pacifists, isolationists, political opponents. They, with loud cries, fastened the term "interventionist" upon him. So far as people now wish we had intervened, Mr. Roosevelt now profits politically.

By a rule of politics almost as certain as one of physics, in proportion as Mr. Roosevelt went in one direction, his opponents went the opposite. In proportion as he suggested intervention, his opponents went toward isolation.

Waht is said here is limited strictly to the matter of intervention versus isolation.

On another point, related but quite different, there must be no confusion. On the matter of arming for defense, nothing said in this article applies. On arming for defense, Mr. Rosevelt's political opponents, specifically the Republicans, were always willing to go as far as Mr. Roosevelt. When he sent his defense measure to Congress, the Republicans endorsed it in a party conference. On passage there were only 15 votes against it in the House, only 9 in the Senate. Of the 8, only 4 were Republicanls.

On national defense, as distinguished from other policies about the war, the Republicans have supported Mr. Roosevelt, and have gone as far as he has.

To Maryland 4-H Club members who live in those counties traversed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, that company has just made availabel three educational awards in connection with the National 4-H Club Congress, which will be held in Chicago from November 29 to December 7, it is announced by E. More than 5,000,000 chicks will be produced by Maryland hatcherymen operating under the Maryland Poultry Improvement Plan during thep resent hatching season, according to Charles Williams, of the University of Maryland poultry department. To produce this number of chicks will require approximately 7,500,000 hatching eggs, most of which will be produced by Maryland poultrymen whose flocks have been selected for standard qualities and high egg production, and which have been tested for Pullorum disease by an authorized representative of the State Livestock Sanitary Service. Maryland flock owners report that this careful selection of breeding stock has paid dividends in greater fall and winter egg production by the pullets raised.

Fifty-seven thousand maple sugar trees were tapped in the state this spring as compared with 58,000 trees last year and for the 1929-1938 average, it is announced by the Maryland Crop Reporting Service. These trees produced only 9,000 pounds of sugar as compared with 20,000 pounds for the 1929-1938 average. This year's production of sirup slightly exceeded the average. The maple sugar and sirup season in Maryland started fully a month later than in 1939 and from three to four weeks later than usual. Sap was unusually sweet but runs were small and short. Many camps did not operate this year, due to the backward season, snow, rainfall, and the cost of labor

Industrial Sense Seen As Needed

By HUGH JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, MAY 23—At the end of a luncheon of B. M. Baruch with the president, Steve Early warned newshawks not to begin guessing that there would be a new War Industries Board. He added that the government is much better organized than it was in 1917.

I think Mr. Early is partly right. But the statement carries hints which, if intended, are altogether wrong. The War Industries Board was an over-all control of our entire economic system, including demand and supply, price and production, transportation and commerce. We were organizing a "nation in arms" for total war by overseas attack. That required us to shoot the works—to make many times the effort we are called upon to make today for defensive preparation. It is true that we do not need to repeat precisely the War Industries Organization.

Is "Nonsense"

It is also true that governmental organization is "different" from that of 1917, but Steve is also reported to have said it is "better." If that means "better to get the maximum effort and production out of industry," it is nonsense.

Even in a 1918 effort, its "differences" would make unnecessary some of the major 1918 organizations. The AAA could handle food supply without a Food Administration. The RFC, SEC and Maritime Commission render unnecessary any War Finance Corporation, Capital Issues Committee, Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation.

But that this government is better organized to do this job of rapid industrial production for rearmament could be described as a colossal though ghastly joke—if it were not so tragic.

In this phase of this war our sole battlefield is on the industrial front. The demand, in quantity, is not a fraction of the demand in 1918 but the demand for speed and cooperation is many times multiplied.

Barriers against Both

This Administration for seven years has built up every barrier it could invent against both. Passing without comment its many laws restricting financing, maximum effort by clogs on speed-ups, overtime and high-pressure management, it had attempted to substitute political regimentation and government competition for the profit motive, which was the only known gas to make our industrial engine go at its best. Our captains in this first battle are to be found in industrial management. Our fate for the moment rests in their hands. These are the gents whose morale and enthusiasm were so lately encouraged by calling them anti-social, anti-American, Copperheads, Tories, Economic Royalists and modern Lord Macaulays—the group whose cooperation was sought by government to stop the illegal bootlegging of "hot" oil and, when it was given, was rewarded by criminal prosecution on charges amounting, depending on their sentences, to felonies.

Of course they will co-operate. Every American will. But for reasons already given and others, to say that this government is "better organized" to use it than that cooperation was in the World war shows just sheer ignorance.

"Asinine" Remark

There is strong indication of this in the fact that the very spearhead of the industrial cooperation and attack—the aviation industrial sortie—is being gallantly led by Mr. Morgenthau, who has so lately cried "rotten fish for sale" with reference to the hoard of gold for the purchase of which he has wasted our substance.

Mr. Morgenthau emerges from a conference, not with industrial experts, but with a couple of Army and Navy officers who know from experience only a little more than he does about what the inside of an industrial plant looks like—which is nothing—and announces that the reason why we can't get airplanes is because we can't get engines. This is by so far the greatest engine creating and engine producing country in the world that there is no comparison. That asinine remark is enough to make Henry Ford curl up and die and in this battle we can't afford to lose him.

No, we don't need a War Industries Board but we do need some glimmer of industrial sense, understanding and experience in government.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

We paid dearly for this centralization at a terrible cost. In 1916 we spent $1,034,000,000 for the Federal Government. In 1927 the total grew to $2,700,000,000. In 1938 the Federal Government spent $7,691,000,000. The State governments followed suit, and in 1938 spent $4,358,000,000, and the local governments spent $6,150,000,000—a grand total of $18,300,000,000 for government in the United States in 1938, in which year we had a total national income of $64,000,000,000. In other words, 28½ per cent for taxes. Is it any wonder that since centralization and bureaucracy run riot, that we have a million people on the Federal payroll.

Prophecy and Leadership Are Different Things

IN his correspondence appearing today on this page, Mark Sullivan discusses the insight manifested during the last few years by President Roosevelt respecting the Second World war. It is true enough that on different occasions the president sensed the probability of an European war, and whatever credit is to be found therein is not to be denied, but it is equally beyond denial that the prophecy was not sustained by policy or action. The plain fact of the matter is that, as the New York Herald Tribune has pointed out, prophecy is not enough.

"The tragedy of Mr. Roosevelt's career," says the Herald Tribune, "was that, seeing the future and the issues thus clearly, he fell so far short of preparing his country to defend itself. By reason of a personal interest and affection he did much for the navy, and he deserves the gratitude of the country therefor. But the vital arm of aviation was gravely neglected. The army—especially in such critical items as anti-aircraft guns and mechanized forces—was all but ignored.

"As a result the nation finds itself today confronted by an imminent danger, and grossly unready to meet it, despite billions expended. Its president had the vision to see and predict but lacked the abilities and the interest to do the practical and efficient things needed to cope with it.

"It is stressing the obvious to note the parallel that lies between this anomaly in foreign policy and the failures of the New Deal at home. The country has had great and proper sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's vision in domestic affairs. His strongest opponents accept the desirability of many of his goals. It is in the field of practice that his administration has worst blundered. Every one has been converted to the ideal of 'security,' for example; but the country now perceives that the only possible base for any real security is a producing and prosperous nation. Similarly, with the bureaucracy which the New Deal has installed upon a socialistic scale. With his eyes fixed upon his goals, it never apparently occurred to the president that he was butchering the entire American way of living and governing in order to end a few abuses.

"There is no need to cite more facts. Precisely as the president foresaw the Second World war but lacked the practical ability to prepare the nation for its consequences, so in domestic concerns he has woefully been inadequate in translating ideal into performance.

"It is on this unarguable record that the head of the nation rests. The gift of prophecy is a great and important one. What President Roosevelt has done to open the eyes of the American people — whether they look overseas or at their domestic problems — has constituted an important public service. But henceforward the nation needs, in both fields, the leadership of an intensely practical mind. The task of arming swiftly calls for the highest industrial skill the nation possesses. To do so at a moment when the New Deal has bent the nation beneath a staggering $42,000,000,000 debt, raised public expenditures to a height which makes huge deficits inescapable, and, by crippling the nation's business held 10,000,000 workers permanently unemployed, constitutes the heaviest executive responsibility that any president has ever faced.

"Every business man, every industrialist, every American, regardless of his party politics, should help Mr. Roosevelt in any way that he is asked to in these difficult months. There must be a complete subordination of selfish or partisan aims in the nation's crisis. But next January a new president, steady, efficient, wise, should enter the White House. The hour of the prophet has passed."

Little need be added to what the Herald Tribune has here so bluntly but clearly expressed.

The New and Deadlier Weapons of War

APPALLING, indeed, is the power of destruction that has been developed in the European war with the use of new weapons and new methods of attack.

Recounting these new and deadlier weapons, far exceeding anything in their destructive power that the World war saw, an analysis by Louis F. Keemle, cable editor of the United Press, shows how co-ordination of smaller weapons of aggression have been used with telling effect by the Nazis.

The new war weapon that strikes the imagination most, Keemle's report shows, is the parachutist. The parachutist is a one-man army, who is dropped by airplane far to the enemy's rear for the purpose of sabotaging communications and paving the way for a general advance. A handful of them may be enabled to seize an entire town if it is undefended and unprepared.

The parachutist often carries a folding bicycle for rapid movement, and in some cases it is even a portable motorcycle. He is armed with a submachine gun and an automatic pistol. He carries field glasses, a gas mask, a portable radio, a water bottle, a camouflaged pup tent and, what is quite important for his mission, a map case with detailed charts of the countryside showing exactly where he is to go and what he is to do. He carries no food, being expected to forage for himself.

Then there are the motorcycle troops, an arm the Germans have been using with telling effect. Behind the parachutists they speed along to reinforce the advance thrust. Behind them come the tanks, then the main army mechanized and able to roll.

The larger weapons have been developed enormously, as the war news has disclosed, including the great dive bombers, the huge tanks, the magnetic mine, deadly menace to shipping, for which, however, the British are reported to have developed an electric belt that offsets it.

The significant phase of the development of weapons, however, lies in the remarkable co-ordination of the smaller new ones with the greater.

Thus far one other deadly weapon remains, which was used in the World war and not yet in this one, this being gas, Keemle notes. Nothing is known of what the Nazis may have concocted for use in this war, but likely they have invented something more frightful and in their ruthless, brutal course they can be expected to utilize it. They were reported to have put the strong Belgian fort of Eben Emael out of action by the use of a gas that paralyzed the gun crews, but that has been only a report.

One may well wonder, in view of the frightful destructiveness of new weapons of warfare how long, if ever, it will be until nations will be obliged to outlaw it and live at peace.

Farm Credit Measure Is Halted by Opposition

THANKS to the growing spirit of independence in Congress, the attempt of the New Deal administration to seize political control of all farm credit agencies has been shelved for this session, according to word from Washington. Determined opposition from farmers of the nation helped to bring this about.

While the president asked Congress to "reduce the surplus funds" of various farm credit agencies by $315,000,000, Secretary Wallace and his puppet chairman of the Farm Credit Administration pleaded for enactment of the Jones-Wheeler Bill, which would give political control of farm loans to the department of Agriculture.

The specious pleas of these bureau politicians fell on somewhat stony ground. Congress is impressed by the strong objections voiced by farm organizations. Farmers demand that they shall have a voice in the policy that spells life or death to farm ownership. They denounce the attempt to coerce them—through loans to save their farms—into compliance with the politico-socialist experiments of bureaucrats in the Wallace department.

No political party has ever yet dragooned the American farmer. No band of theorists has ever succeeded in robbing the farmer of his independence, financial or political. In this year 1940, when the discredited New Deal is on the way out, when farmers are demanding the square deal that has been denied them, it is a poor time for the president to ask Congress to strip farm credit agencies of their resources.

It is a poor time for the New Deal to ask Congress to place farmers under financial control so that they may be coerced into voting to give a new lease of life to their tormentors.

Giants at Large Forseen in Books

Edwin C. Hill

It would perhaps be well if we had a system for recording the runs, hits and errors of prophecy, as well as baseball. In these last ominous few days, I have been checking on our major and minor prophets of the last twenty-five years. Most of them were wrong; a few had a rough, general idea of what was going to happen; still fewer read the crystal ball like today's newspaper.

As above, it would seem sensible to pick the winning prophet, put him in the cabinet and make him national Secretary of Prophecy. Merlin had a job something like that, as did many other mediaeval seers and star-gazers. The idea is not novel in modern times. There's nothing more modern than Wall street. Witness how it goes for everything in this line from sun spots to the late Evangeline Adams, seeress, who read the ticker-tape of tomorrow. Perhaps our government is just an old stick-in-the-mud—an old fogy in congress gaiters and a beaver hat.

Quite Astonishing

Forgetting the mystery-mongers, it is quite astonishing the way a few thoughtful men have read the future since the shot at Sarajevo, which was perhaps the starting gun of new destiny. A few days ago we mentioned one Ernst Henri, writing a book in 1934, in which he noted that a man named Quisling was readying Norway for the German game bag, and predicting that the kill would come off as advertised. In telling what Hitler would do in the line of "scientific barbarization" of the world, he used the future tense, but he might just as well have used the past tense, and it would have been history today.

Today we cite two books by the late Thorstein Veblen, famous American economist. One is "Imperial Germany and the Industrial Revolution", published in 1915, and the other is "The Nature of Peace", published in 1917. Other economists and historians skirted around the idea of the fluxing of an archaic culture with the fiendish energies and instrumentalities of modern scientific warfare, but Veblen was the only one to hit it right on the nose.

In the above two books, his theme was that after the World war, Germany and Japan would be at large in the civilized world like the wicked giants, Gog and Magog, armed with machine guns instead of bludgeons. He predicted that they would revert to premediaeval culture and morality, going all the way back to the gods of the mountain top. Veblen died about the time the Nazis took up with Wotan.

Ironic Critic

Veblen looked like a preternaturally wise and bright-eyed little old prairie dog peeping out of his burrow and popping in again. He was pretty much of a hermit, an ironic critic of the tragedie humaine, and he imbedded his profound meditations in a mother lode of erudition from which it is sometimes difficult to blast out his definite meaning. But, run through the stamp mill, his views, as validated by today's newspapers, assay perhaps deeper discernment of the modern drift than those of any man of his time.

For example, he saw quite clearly that England's aversion to conveyor-belt production and her insistence on quality, rather than swift obsolescence, would be assessed against her in wartime—the wartime of today when Germans belch out planes to spend them quickly while England lags with her quality production.

The archaic morality of the German "dynastic state" is clearly and specifically analyzed as the sanction and driving force of the new barbaric aggression. Here is a key passage from "Imperial Germany":

Key Passage

"The German people have been enabled to take up the technological heritage of the English without having paid for it in the habits of thought, the use and wont, induced in the English community by the experience involved in achieving it. Modern technology has come to the Germans ready-made, without the cultural consequences which its gradual development and continued use have entailed among the people whose experience initiated it."

Barbaric Germany is a gate-crasher in the civilized world. Congress ought to read Thorstein Veblen as it shapes our new defense policies. One may say definitely that if the British government of the last nine years had been made to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the above two books England wouldn't have been hell's hole today.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE PROBLEM OF FINANCING

Denunciation in Place of Leadership By Executive Now Seen As Mistake

MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 23 — Politically, President Roosevelt is going to gain by the war development in Europe. He gains because, on this point, he had more foresight than most in America. For his rightness on one point, which turned out to be important and spectacular, he will gain more than this alone entitles him to. That always happens. Always a prophet who turns out to be right is given credit for more than he actually did. Upon him the imaginative public plalces an aura of oracular infallibility. Even more than that, the public, seeing him as a paragon of prophecy, promptly thinks of him as a paragon i nother respects. It is illogical; it frequently has unfortunate results. But it always happens.

Mark Sullivan

Mr. Roosevelt's foresight (on this point) is proved by four conspicious incidents.

Nearly three years ago, October 5, 1937, Mr. Roosevelt took notice of the aggression of Japan in China, of Italy in Ethiopia, and the preparations Germany was making. Without naming the nation, Mr. Roosevelt used the phrase "acts of aggression", and suggested "quarantine." The peace-loving nations," he said, "must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties. . . ."

At once, pacifists, isolationists, and political opponents charged that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to "involve us in other nations' wars."

Plane Buying Facilitated

Again, in January 1939, a new military plane, being tested in California, came down in a forced landing. Newsmen found that an occupant of the plane was a French military officer. This was told with a manner of sinister mystery uncovered. In a series of horrendous disclosures, it turned out that the French and British governments were buying planes in the United States. And that Mr. Roosevelt not only was aware, but had facilitated the transaction.

From this arose new denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt, almost hysterical suspicion. Not only was he interfering in a prospective war abroad, not only trying to make us an ally of France and Britain, he was attempting it furtively. So angry was the outcry that Mr. Roosevelt became obviously timorous, acted almost like a person caught in a crime. His explanation was apologetic.

Denounced As Lie

Again, in January 1939, Mr. Roosevelt was quoted as saying, in a private talk with congresmen, that America's first line of defense is in France. While he did not really quite say that, something much like that expressed the spirit of his position. So great was the outcry against such a notion that Mr. Roosevelt, in self-defense, denounced the alleged statement as a "lie."

Again in August 1939, as Congress was about to adjourn, Mr. Roosevelt asked leladers to keep Congress in Washington, so as to revise the neutrality law, in a way which would give Britain and France opportunity to buy munitions in America. Mr. Roosevelt thought there would be a war before Congress met again in January. Senator Borah tartly replied that his information was there would be no war. Congress went home without acting on the neutrality law. Within a month, war came.

In these incidents, as it now turns out, Mr. Roosevelt was prophetically right, in the sense that he saw war was coming. So much, all must admit. Not all, but a large number, now thinks he was right in an additional sense. Probably a majority of Americans, in the light of what has now happened, wish we had joined in some movement to quarantine aggressors. They wish more planes had been sold to the British and French. They wish we had changed our neutrality law earlier, and changed it much farther than we did in the direction of being helpful to France and Britain. They see that if Mr. Roosevelt had used the actual words "America's first line of defense is in France," he would have been right — it was precisely on the day Germany entered France, that America recognized it must arm for defense.

Gestures Mild

Mr. Roosevelt's gestures toward intervention were mild. He never gave bold leadership to the idea. What made his gestures conspicious was the denunciation of his critics—pacifists, isolationists, political opponents. They, with loud cries, fastened the term "interventionist" upon him. So far as people now wish we had intervened, Mr. Roosevelt now profits politically.

By a rule of politics almost as certain as one of physics, in proportion as Mr. Roosevelt went in one direction, his opponents went the opposite. In proportion as he suggested intervention, his opponents went toward isolation.

Waht is said here is limited strictly to the matter of intervention versus isolation.

On another point, related but quite different, there must be no confusion. On the matter of arming for defense, nothing said in this article applies. On arming for defense, Mr. Rosevelt's political opponents, specifically the Republicans, were always willing to go as far as Mr. Roosevelt. When he sent his defense measure to Congress, the Republicans endorsed it in a party conference. On passage there were only 15 votes against it in the House, only 9 in the Senate. Of the 8, only 4 were Republicanls.

On national defense, as distinguished from other policies about the war, the Republicans have supported Mr. Roosevelt, and have gone as far as he has.

Maryland Farm Musings

By the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

The wheat acreage allottment for Maryland in the 1941 agricultural conservation program is 382,487 acres, it is announced by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. He announces also that there will be no marketing quota proclaimed for wheat this year.

To Maryland 4-H Club members who live in those counties traversed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, that company has just made availabel three educational awards in connection with the National 4-H Club Congress, which will be held in Chicago from November 29 to December 7, it is announced by E. G. Jenkins state boys' agent for Maryland. The awards will be made on the basis of outstanding 4-H Club achievements.

---

More than 5,000,000 chicks will be produced by Maryland hatcherymen operating under the Maryland Poultry Improvement Plan during thep resent hatching season, according to Charles Williams, of the University of Maryland poultry department. To produce this number of chicks will require approximately 7,500,000 hatching eggs, most of which will be produced by Maryland poultrymen whose flocks have been selected for standard qualities and high egg production, and which have been tested for Pullorum disease by an authorized representative of the State Livestock Sanitary Service. Maryland flock owners report that this careful selection of breeding stock has paid dividends in greater fall and winter egg production by the pullets raised.

Fifty-seven thousand maple sugar trees were tapped in the state this spring as compared with 58,000 trees last year and for the 1929-1938 average, it is announced by the Maryland Crop Reporting Service. These trees produced only 9,000 pounds of sugar as compared with 20,000 pounds for the 1929-1938 average. This year's production of sirup slightly exceeded the average. The maple sugar and sirup season in Maryland started fully a month later than in 1939 and from three to four weeks later than usual. Sap was unusually sweet but runs were small and short. Many camps did not operate this year, due to the backward season, snow, rainfall, and the cost of labor

Industrial Sense Seen As Needed

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, MAY 23—At the end of a luncheon of B. M. Baruch with the president, Steve Early warned newshawks not to begin guessing that there would be a new War Industries Board. He added that the government is much better organized than it was in 1917.

I think Mr. Early is partly right. But the statement carries hints which, if intended, are altogether wrong. The War Industries Board was an over-all control of our entire economic system, including demand and supply, price and production, transportation and commerce. We were organizing a "nation in arms" for total war by overseas attack. That required us to shoot the works—to make many times the effort we are called upon to make today for defensive preparation. It is true that we do not need to repeat precisely the War Industries Organization.

Is "Nonsense"

It is also true that governmental organization is "different" from that of 1917, but Steve is also reported to have said it is "better." If that means "better to get the maximum effort and production out of industry," it is nonsense.

Even in a 1918 effort, its "differences" would make unnecessary some of the major 1918 organizations. The AAA could handle food supply without a Food Administration. The RFC, SEC and Maritime Commission render unnecessary any War Finance Corporation, Capital Issues Committee, Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation.

But that this government is better organized to do this job of rapid industrial production for rearmament could be described as a colossal though ghastly joke—if it were not so tragic.

In this phase of this war our sole battlefield is on the industrial front. The demand, in quantity, is not a fraction of the demand in 1918 but the demand for speed and cooperation is many times multiplied.

Barriers against Both

This Administration for seven years has built up every barrier it could invent against both. Passing without comment its many laws restricting financing, maximum effort by clogs on speed-ups, overtime and high-pressure management, it had attempted to substitute political regimentation and government competition for the profit motive, which was the only known gas to make our industrial engine go at its best. Our captains in this first battle are to be found in industrial management. Our fate for the moment rests in their hands. These are the gents whose morale and enthusiasm were so lately encouraged by calling them anti-social, anti-American, Copperheads, Tories, Economic Royalists and modern Lord Macaulays—the group whose cooperation was sought by government to stop the illegal bootlegging of "hot" oil and, when it was given, was rewarded by criminal prosecution on charges amounting, depending on their sentences, to felonies.

Of course they will co-operate. Every American will. But for reasons already given and others, to say that this government is "better organized" to use it than that cooperation was in the World war shows just sheer ignorance.

"Asinine" Remark

There is strong indication of this in the fact that the very spearhead of the industrial cooperation and attack—the aviation industrial sortie—is being gallantly led by Mr. Morgenthau, who has so lately cried "rotten fish for sale" with reference to the hoard of gold for the purchase of which he has wasted our substance.

Mr. Morgenthau emerges from a conference, not with industrial experts, but with a couple of Army and Navy officers who know from experience only a little more than he does about what the inside of an industrial plant looks like—which is nothing—and announces that the reason why we can't get airplanes is because we can't get engines. This is by so far the greatest engine creating and engine producing country in the world that there is no comparison. That asinine remark is enough to make Henry Ford curl up and die and in this battle we can't afford to lose him.

No, we don't need a War Industries Board but we do need some glimmer of industrial sense, understanding and experience in government.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By Representative Wesley E. Disney, Democrat, of Oklahoma

We paid dearly for this centralization at a terrible cost. In 1916 we spent $1,034,000,000 for the Federal Government. In 1927 the total grew to $2,700,000,000. In 1938 the Federal Government spent $7,691,000,000. The State governments followed suit, and in 1938 spent $4,358,000,000, and the local governments spent $6,150,000,000—a grand total of $18,300,000,000 for government in the United States in 1938, in which year we had a total national income of $64,000,000,000. In other words, 28½ per cent for taxes. Is it any wonder that since centralization and bureaucracy run riot, that we have a million people on the Federal payroll.

Rumania Calls Up 300,000 Reservists

Most of Them Are Sent to Soviet Frontier in Mobilization Move

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 23 (AP) — Rumania has called up 300,000 reservists and sent most of them to the Soviet frontier, in a virtual general mobilization which reflected fears that the Russian army might move soon on the Rumanian province of Bessarabia.

It was an action which brought this oil-rich kingdom's defenses to what the general staff called "the highest state of preparedness."

Some observers said they saw in it an indication of deterioration of Russia's nine-month-old friendship with Germany. They insisted the Rumanian strengthening of the frontier was carried out with the approval, if not the counsel, of Germany.

Bessarabia was Russian before 1918.

King Carol followed up his call to the colors with a proclamation demanding that the nation "work strenuously and hold steadfastly to its patriotic duty."

He cancelled celebrations scheduled for June 8, commemorating the tenth anniversary of his enthronement, declaring the money would be better spent on guns to defend Rumania's frontiers.

The story behind the reinforcement of the Bessarabian frontier, as told by certain informants here, goes back to the Russo-German agreement made in August, in the last days of an uneasy peace.

At that time, they said, the Germans were understood to have told Russia she could have Bessarabia any time.

Success of the Nazi blitzkrieg in the West, it was declared, led Russian diplomacy to fear that Germany might renege — might even turn to the Soviet for the fulfillment of Adolf Hitler's dream of a German Ukraine.

Soviet troop concentration on the Rumanian border are reported in military quarters to have been heavily reinforced in the last few days.

Rumania's great wealth lies in oil—which is essential to mechanized warfare.

Dewey Will Get 18 Delegates From Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 23 (AP) —The Republican state convention today instructed Kentucky's four delegates-at-large — part of the state's delegation of twenty-two—to vote for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey for the presidency at the National Convention at Philadelphia.

Previously, district conventions had instructed two other delegates for Dewey and two for United States Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

The remaining fourteen delegates are uninstructed, but United States Representative John M. Robison, convention chairman, said Dewey appeared "assured" of eighteen of the state's delegates.

PITTED AGAINST NAZI TANKS

A British gun crew unloads an anti-tank gun from a transport truck after rapid transfer to a new position somewhere in France. The Allies had hoped to checkmate the mechanized might of the Nazis with thousands of these guns, but they seem to be inadequate against huge rolling fortresses; the French have been forced to use their famous 75's.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 23 (AP) —The Republican state convention today instructed Kentucky's four delegates-at-large — part of the state's delegation of twenty-two—to vote for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey for the presidency at the National Convention at Philadelphia.

Previously, district conventions had instructed two other delegates for Dewey and two for United States Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

The remaining fourteen delegates are uninstructed, but United States Representative John M. Robison, convention chairman, said Dewey appeared "assured" of eighteen of the state's delegates.

Senator Byrnes Strikes Back At Lindbergh

Flays Flier for Criticism of Administration's Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — Striking back at Col. Charles A Lindbergh for his criticism of Roosevelt administration foreign policy, Senator Byrnes (D-SC) declared that Lindbergh was "no more qualified" to speak on the subject than "Wrong Way Corrigan or any other aviator who may fly the Atlantic ocean."

He added that "fifth columns are already active in America" and that "those who consciously or unconsciously retard the efforts of this government to provide for the defense of the American people are the fifth column's most effective fellow travellers."

Byrnes's address, prepared for delivery over the radio (CBS) was considered the administration forces' official reply to the speech in which Lindbergs called last Sunday for an end to "hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion," decried what he considered meddling in Europe and urged a "definite policy" of defense.

Byrnes said President Roosevelt had a "definite policy of defense already formulated" and had stated it "time and again."

The Senator said that "Mr. Lindbergh" (nowhere in the manuscript of the speech did the title "Colonel" appear) had accepted a decoration from Hitler. He went on to inquire:

"When Mr. Lindbergh says, 'no one wishes to attack us,' is he authorized to speak for Hitler or Goering? Can the American people in the light of recent history, accept the assurance of this young gentleman that if we do not ask for war it will not come to us?"

Byrnes, chairman of the Senate naval appropriations sub-committee, took sharp issue with Lindbergh's statement that foreign air forces do not have bombing planes capable of crossing the ocean and returning and criticized the flier's views on policy as well.

"Mr. Lindbergh seems not concerned with the flagrant violations of the rights of peaceful little nations, the cruel and bitter persecution of God-fearing men, women and children, because of their religion, race or political opinions; the burning of books, the bombing of helpless women and children fleeing in terror from their homes; the parachute spies and the torch troops. To Mr. Lindbergh all these seem to be only trifling insignificant incidents to an age-old struggle for power.

"Mr. Lindbergh may tell us to 'stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion,' but I thank God that America has at last been aroused to the dangers that beset her in a world menaced by brute force and strident ambition and is grimly determined to arm in self-defense."

Nazis Say Allies Using Civilians As Shields

BERLIN, May 23 (AP via radio) —The German high command has accused England and French troops of using Belgian civilians as shields and charged that other violations of international law were practiced by the Allies.

The accusations were made in the presence of German and foreign press representatives. A number of officers and soldiers were presented as witnesses.

The German command maintained that retreating military columns in Belgium were interspersed with civilians in such a way that German airmen were forced to halt their firing, in accordance with orders, and suffered losses thereby.

Both mobile and stationary Red Cross equipment likewise has been used by the Allies for combat purposes, the Germans charged. This usage, it was contended, included operations of Red Cross vehicles as a screen for armored cars.

In at least one case, the correspondents were told, a machine gun was operated from a Red Cross vehicle.

Kidnap Hitler? Well, Eight Americans Almost Got the Kaiser, Back in '19

A group of Pittsburgh residents, represented by Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, has offered $1,000,000 in cash to the person or persons who will deliver German Chancellor Adolf Hitler "alive, unwounded and unhurt" to the League of Nations for "trial for his crimes against the peace and dignity of the world."

The offer recalls the unsuccessful attempt to kidnap the German kaiser in January, 1919, the story of which follows:

By TOBY WIANT
AP Feature Service Writer

Eight Tennesseans, led by Col. Luke Lea, set out in January, 1919, to kidnap the German Kaiser. They returned with an ash tray.

They had plotted to take the Kaiser to the peace conference at Paris as a gift to President Wilson.

Their expedition turned into a comedy of errors, however, because a bridge was washed out and a ferryman was stubborn.

But they weren't completely disappointed. They came within a few inches of their quarry. And their ash tray was a honey — a figure of a German police dog with a long-stemmed pipe in his mouth, bearing the German imperial coat of arms and under it the initials, W. I.: Wilhelm Imperator.

Right Off the Bat

The Tennesseans, including Capt. Leland S. (Larry) MacPhail, now vice-president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, started from Tuntange, in Luxembourg, where their outfit — the 114th Field Artillery — was stationed.

They ran into passport difficulty at once. But Colonel Lea, who had been a United States Senator, knew Brand Whitlock, then United States Minister to Belgium.

Through Whitlock's influence, they got visas and a laissez-passer giving them authority to travel in Holland.

The authorization requested "custom and excise officers to give all facilities permitted by existing regulations to the most honorable Senator Colonel Luke Lea, who is proceeding to Holland and return by motor car on official duty for the United States government."

The statements in the authorization weren't quite correct, but they worked wonders.

The men entered Holland in two automobiles Jan. 5, 1919.

Bridge Washed Out

Within 16 kilometers of the Kaiser's sanctuary at Amerongen, Holland, they ran into the trouble that foiled their plot. A bridge was washed out. A ferryman agreed to take them across the stream, but he stubbornly refused to wait for their return, or even to be on call during the night.

This situation made the kidnaping out of the question.

But they went ahead, just to see what they could see.

They arrived at the Kaiser's castle at night and boldly knocked at the heavy gates. An amazed sentry let them in.

Count von Bentinck, son of the Kaiser's host, asked the purpose of their visit.

"I can reveal the object of our visit only to the Kaiser," replied Lea.

The Count, visibly agitated, excused himself. He returned to explain that the Kaiser would not see them unless they disclosed the purpose of the visit.

Lea insisted he would talk only to the Kaiser.

Then the burgomaster of Amerongen walked in. He also demanded a reason for their visit. The Americans refused to divulge it.

What Do You Mean?

Lea brought out the laissezpasser, which created a distinct impression upon the Count and the Burgomaster.

"You are here then on official business of the American government?" the Count asked.

"Oh, no," replied Lea. "We are here on a journalistic investigation as our application for this laissez-passer stated at Brussels."

"What do you mean by 'journalistic investigation'? Is it a technical term in the army, or are you newspaper reporters?"

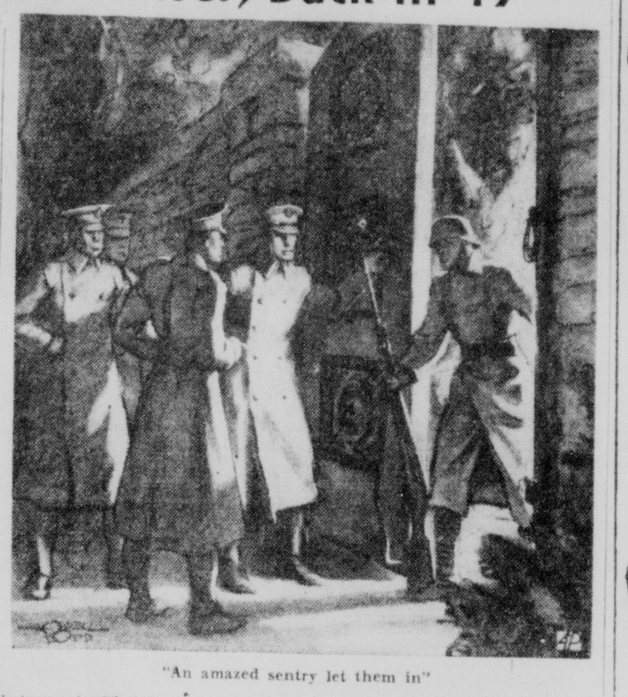
"The phrase speaks for itself," insisted Lea, and refused to elaborate.

The Count and the Burgomaster went into a huddle outside of the room. When they returned, they said the Kaiser was unwilling to refuse to meet them, but wanted their word that they represented Wilson, Pershing, or "even Col. E. M. House."

The Americans refused to give their word. Their hosts kept them talking for more than an hour until the Americans smelled a rat. They became convinced their hosts intended to detain them, yet not permit them to see the Kaiser.

Outside the castle 150 to 200 Dutch troops had gathered by this time. The Americans decided it was time to "git". So they made their bows and left hurriedly.

A few minutes later, the theft of the ash tray was discovered. But the Americans managed to slip across the border and elude the troops, despite a long delay at the bridge washout.



"An amazed sentry let them in"

A Year's Pay

For weeks afterward, they were detained at the American general headquarters at Chaumont, but finally got off with reprimands.

In 1921, at a reunion of the 30th Division at Nashville, Tenn., General John J. Pershing said, when asked what he thought of the attempt to kidnap the Kaiser:

"Why, I'd have given a year's pay to have been with those boys in Holland."

"Not Tempted" By $1,000,000 Offer

Colonel Lea, of Nashville, says he is "not tempted" by the $1,000,000 offer to the person or persons who capture Adolf Hitler and deliver him unharmed to the League of Nations for trial.

"I believe," he explains, "Hitler's war guilt is greater than that of the Kaiser, but since the United States is not at war I don't think Americans should become involved in it."

There will be no peace in Europe, he contends, "until Hitler meets the same fate as Napoleon."

"When I led our party to visit the Kaiser I was prompted by the idea that he was solely responsible for the war, and that he should have been punished just as Napoleon was."

Bombers Are Spanning Ocean

American Made Ships Are Being Flown from U. S. to Europe

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — Bombing planes, it has been disclosed, are flying under their own power from the backyards of American factories to the battle fields of Europe.

The flights can not be made directly from the United States, because of the neutrality law. In practice, the planes are flown to the Canadian border, hauled across the line, flown again to a base and fueled for the 2,000 miles of Atlantic ocean between Newfoundland and Ireland.

Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French Purchasing Mission, told the story of the flights today. He gave no details, except that some planes already had negotiated the hop and others would, as soon as built.

Flights had been made so far, he said, only by heavy bombers. This indicated that the planes were two-motored Lockheed-Hudson and Martin bombers, of which the Allies have bought large quantities. These ships were designed originally for the American army, which seeks ranges farther than 5,000 miles in some of its bombing types.

Experts were doubtful that any pursuit ships had flown the Atlantic, because these craft are built for such speed that they have ranges of only a few hundred miles.

The new bombers to be flown, Purvis indicated, were hundreds of new types Lockheeds, Martins, Boeings, and Consolidated.

Faster production of these latest types was the goal of Purvis and his French colleague, Frederick Bloch-Laine, in their visit today to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. Purvis said the Allies were anxious to be assured of "priorities" of their orders over the huge new purchases to be made by the United States in fulfillment of President Roosevelt's aim of a 50,000 plane fleet for the United States.

Four More Americans Reported Missing

PARIS, May 23 (b)—Four more young Americans were added today to the list of the missing from Anne Morgan's ambulance unit, operating in the northern war zone, and officials expressed belief that five others previously not accounted for were dead or German prisoners.

The latest to drop from sight was last seen driving casualty-laden ambulances south of a town now in German hands.

American Made Ships Are Being Flown from U. S. to Europe

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — Bombing planes, it has been disclosed, are flying under their own power from the backyards of American factories to the battle fields of Europe.

The flights can not be made directly from the United States, because of the neutrality law. In practice, the planes are flown to the Canadian border, hauled across the line, flown again to a base and fueled for the 2,000 miles of Atlantic ocean between Newfoundland and Ireland.

Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French Purchasing Mission, told the story of the flights today. He gave no details, except that some planes already had negotiated the hop and others would, as soon as built.

Flights had been made so far, he said, only by heavy bombers. This indicated that the planes were two-motored Lockheed-Hudson and Martin bombers, of which the Allies have bought large quantities. These ships were designed originally for the American army, which seeks ranges farther than 5,000 miles in some of its bombing types.

Experts were doubtful that any pursuit ships had flown the Atlantic, because these craft are built for such speed that they have ranges of only a few hundred miles.

The new bombers to be flown, Purvis indicated, were hundreds of new types Lockheeds, Martins, Boeings, and Consolidated.

Faster production of these latest types was the goal of Purvis and his French colleague, Frederick Bloch-Laine, in their visit today to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. Purvis said the Allies were anxious to be assured of "priorities" of their orders over the huge new purchases to be made by the United States in fulfillment of President Roosevelt's aim of a 50,000 plane fleet for the United States.

Four More Americans Reported Missing

PARIS, May 23 (b)—Four more young Americans were added today to the list of the missing from Anne Morgan's ambulance unit, operating in the northern war zone, and officials expressed belief that five others previously not accounted for were dead or German prisoners.

The latest to drop from sight was last seen driving casualty-laden ambulances south of a town now in German hands.

A Perfect Date and a Swimming Lesson Combine to Give Lorna the Most Exciting Weekend of Her Life.

By WILLIE MAE ROUTTEN

"I can't do it, and I won't do it! It'll ruin me!" Lorna was mumbling to herself as she walked along the hall to her room. Her lips were pressed tight. She ignored the students who brushed past her.

"She doesn't look very happy about her date," she heard one of them say.

"Date!" Lorna barked the word contemptuously. She reached her room, threw her books on the desk and herself on the bed. She glared at Larry's picture. "Why couldn't you have come on Saturday?" she asked him. Larry continued to look sophisticated and amused. "Tomorrow I might be beautiful, but tonight I'll look like an old hag!" She pounded the pillow to a butterfly shape. "No one can look beautiful after a swimming lesson." She thought of her dry, drawn skin, her stringy hair, and rebellious self-pity swept over her. She gave herself up to the job of completely denouncing the fates. They were the ones that let her decide to take swimming this semester; they were the ones that made swimming the last class on Friday afternoon; they were the ones that made her spend her "permanent" money on a new dress. In fact, to go back to the very beginning, they were the ones that had deprived her of curly hair. And now here she was with a date, a rare thing for an inmate of a girls' college. The man was to take her dancing tonight, just four hours after she was to emerge dripping and curlless from the swimming pool.

"Lorna Sat on the Side of the Bed."

She rose from the bed with determination in every movement. One step took her to the opposite side of the room where a built-in dresser carried a heavy load of feminine necessities. She moved her hands experimentally through the scrambled odds and ends that filled the top drawer. One finger contacted a cold, sharp instrument and she drew forth a pair of tweezers.

Lorna sat on the side of the bed and removed a white saddle shoe, a red sock, and an "Autumn Brown" stocking from her left foot. She propped the bare foot onto her right knee and thoughtfully went to work at the exposed sole.

At 3:30 Lorna stretched her foot in front of her and wiggled her toes. Satisfaction covered her face in a smug smile. She pinched the artificial infection to increase its redness. Then she put on her shoes and stockings and walked across to the gym.

Lorna slipped quietly into the locker room and slid between the benches to her locker. A blonde girl in a drooping gray tank suit was fiddling with a padlock and singing off tune. She looked up when Lorna came in.

"Where've you been?" she asked and went on singing without waiting for an answer. Lorna flashed a smile in her direction as she jerked open the metal door. Standing on the bench she fished a white rubber cap from the top shelf of the locker. She yanked the bandana from her head without stopping to untie the big knot under her chin. It caught on a bobby pin. Carefully she stretched the rubber cap and pulled it over the pinned curls. The blond girl was sitting on the bench now, hugging her knees.

"You can't wear boby pins into the pool," she chanted. "They stop up the drain."

"I'm not going to," Lorna answered. "I'm not even going in. I've got an infection.

"Then what are you putting the cap on for?"

"I don't want Smithie to see that I've got my hair up. She might get a right idea." Lorna looked significantly at her companion.

The girl nodded her head wisely but cynically. "I don't think it'll work," she said. A shrill whistle drowned Lorna's reply. The blonde sprang to her feet and ran out of the room.

"Smithie must be impatient," thought Lorna as she practiced limping. "But I have to be sure that I'm limping on the foot that's supposed to hurt."

"You are late, Miss Haynes." Miss Smithers' dark eyes glowed beneath bushy eyebrows. Her masculine-cut hair was tousled. Her voice was flat and spiritless as she uttered the statement of Lorna's lateness.

"I know, Miss Smithers, and I'm terribly sorry," Lorna was sweetly humble. "I'm afraid I won't be able to go in swimming. I seem to be getting an infection in my foot." Her tongue stumbled on the last sentence so she crossed her fingers and felt better.

"Take your shoe off and let me see it." The instructress fluttered a hand in the direction of the bench.

"It doesn't look like much," she said as she spread the skin with her fingers.

Lorna jerked her leg away. "It hurts terribly," she said and crossed her fingers again. Smithers hesitated and Lorna knew that her fate was being decided.

"You may go," the superior said abruptly. "But see that you are back next week." She turned and strode out of the room. Lorna hugged herself.

The music was sweet and swingy and the lights were low.

"Nice place," Larry commented into Lorna's hair. She gave him a smile.

"Let's sit down, Larry," she suggested.

"Now?" He looked startled. "But we haven't been dancing five minutes." Lorna did not reply. They danced to the side of the floor and then made their way to a small corner table. Conversation was neglected.

"I thought dancing was your favorite occupation," Larry said finally.

"It is." Lorna bit her lip. "But my foot hurts. I think I've got an infection, or something," she said plaintively, and didn't cross her fingers.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

BERLIN, May 23 (AP)—A compilation by DNB, official news agency, has credited the Germans with destroying nearly 1,700 enemy planes between May 10, the start of the Netherlands-Belgium invasion, and May 15.

DNB said rapid movement of air force bases often delayed full reports so that the righ command's communiques did not always give the full extent of the damage to the allied air forces.

They were the ones that let her decide to take swimming this semester; they were the ones that made swimming the last class on Friday afternoon; they were the ones that made her spend her "permanent" money on a new dress. In fact, to go back to the very beginning, they were the ones that had deprived her of curly hair. And now here she was with a date, a rare thing for an inmate of a girls' college. The man was to take her dancing tonight, just four hours after she was to emerge dripping and curlless from the swimming pool.

"Lorna Sat on the Side of the Bed."

She rose from the bed with determination in every movement. One step took her to the opposite side of the room where a built-in dresser carried a heavy load of feminine necessities. She moved her hands experimentally through the scrambled odds and ends that filled the top drawer. One finger contacted a cold, sharp instrument and she drew forth a pair of tweezers.

Lorna sat on the side of the bed and removed a white saddle shoe, a red sock, and an "Autumn Brown" stocking from her left foot. She propped the bare foot onto her right knee and thoughtfully went to work at the exposed sole.

At 3:30 Lorna stretched her foot in front of her and wiggled her toes. Satisfaction covered her face in a smug smile. She pinched the artificial infection to increase its redness. Then she put on her shoes and stockings and walked across to the gym.

Lorna slipped quietly into the locker room and slid between the benches to her locker. A blonde girl in a drooping gray tank suit was fiddling with a padlock and singing off tune. She looked up when Lorna came in.

"Where've you been?" she asked and went on singing without waiting for an answer. Lorna flashed a smile in her direction as she jerked open the metal door. Standing on the bench she fished a white rubber cap from the top shelf of the locker. She yanked the bandana from her head without stopping to untie the big knot under her chin. It caught on a bobby pin. Carefully she stretched the rubber cap and pulled it over the pinned curls. The blond girl was sitting on the bench now, hugging her knees.

"You can't wear boby pins into the pool," she chanted. "They stop up the drain."

"I'm not going to," Lorna answered. "I'm not even going in. I've got an infection."

"Then what are you putting the cap on for?"

"I don't want Smithie to see that I've got my hair up. She might get a right idea." Lorna looked significantly at her companion.

The girl nodded her head wisely but cynically. "I don't think it'll work," she said. A shrill whistle drowned Lorna's reply. The blonde sprang to her feet and ran out of the room.

"Smithie must be impatient," thought Lorna as she practiced limping. "But I have to be sure that I'm limping on the foot that's supposed to hurt."

"You are late, Miss Haynes." Miss Smithers' dark eyes glowed beneath bushy eyebrows. Her masculine-cut hair was tousled. Her voice was flat and spiritless as she uttered the statement of Lorna's lateness.

"I know, Miss Smithers, and I'm terribly sorry," Lorna was sweetly humble. "I'm afraid I won't be able to go in swimming. I seem to be getting an infection in my foot." Her tongue stumbled on the last sentence so she crossed her fingers and felt better.

"Take your shoe off and let me see it." The instructress fluttered a hand in the direction of the bench.

"It doesn't look like much," she said as she spread the skin with her fingers.

Lorna jerked her leg away. "It hurts terribly," she said and crossed her fingers again. Smithers hesitated and Lorna knew that her fate was being decided.

"You may go," the superior said abruptly. "But see that you are back next week." She turned and strode out of the room. Lorna hugged herself.

The music was sweet and swingy and the lights were low.

"Nice place," Larry commented into Lorna's hair. She gave him a smile.

"Let's sit down, Larry," she suggested.

"Now?" He looked startled. "But we haven't been dancing five minutes." Lorna did not reply. They danced to the side of the floor and then made their way to a small corner table. Conversation was neglected.

"I thought dancing was your favorite occuption," Larry said finally.

"It is." Lorna bit her lip. "But my foot hurts. I think I've got an infection, or something," she said plaintively, and didn't cross her fingers.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

News Agency Credits Germans with Destroying 1,700 Enemy Planes

BERLIN, May 23 (AP)—A compilation by DNB, official news agency has credited the Germans with destroying nearly 1,700 enemy planes between May 10, the start of the Netherlands-Belgium invasion, and May 15.

DNB said rapid movement of air force bases often delayed full reports so that the righ command's communiques did not always give the full extent of the damage to the allied air forces.

Cox Asks Political Parties To Defer Their Conventions

DAYTON, O., May 23 (AP)—Former Governor James M. Cox, Democratic presidential nominee in 1920, has asked that both political parties defer their convention as long as possible because of "unpredictable conditions."

Cox declared in an editorial in his Dayton Daily News that "September would not be too late."

"The Republican convention," he wrote, "is called for June 25, less than a month away. At that date the party may face conditions so unpredictable that writing a platform for the November electorate would be absurd.

"Three weeks later come the Democrats, likewise shooting in the dark. It might be well if both conventions be deferred."

Cox pointed out that if an incumbent in the presidency is defeated either for renomination or reelection, he is a "lame duck" from the date of the convention or of the election until inauguration of his successor.

"His hand is paralyzed," Cox said.

"This makes small difference in ordinary times. In time of crisis the difference is vital."

James Blasts New Deal, Wants Congress In Session Until Crisis Has Abated

ST. PAUL, May 23 (AP)—Pennsylvania's Governor Arthur H. James calls upon Congress to remain in session until the war crisis has abated and served notice that he would fight any proposal for a "coalition" national cabinet.

"So far as I am concerned there will be neither a blackout nor a cowardly fadeout of the Republican party so long as there is a threat that the blood of a single American boy will be shed in useless war," he said.

The keystone governor, speaking before an audience of 500 Republican leaders gathered here on the eve of the state party convention, blasted the New Deal, which he charged "has been attempting to by-pass the constitution."

His address left the crowd shouting for more after he finished his half-hour nationwide radio broadcast.

Dentistry Is Making Rapid Strides Today

Method of Treating Aching Teeth In Other Years Is Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

When you have an aching tooth you may put off tending to it for sentimental reasons—that is for reasons associated with pain and fear. But usually — and always if it gets too bad — you reach for the telephone, and half an hour later you are seated in a high chair in an efficient looking office, a little apprehensive perhaps, but about to have a scientific adjustment of your troubles. The tooth may have to come out, but this is rare. It is likely to have the decayed part drilled out, the nerve irritation relieved, and the cavity filled with a substantial material that is almost as good and tough, if not more so, than your own originall tooth material.

Usually Pulled Tooth

Your great grandparents had no such choices. If they had the toothache they just had to bear it until the traveling toothpuller came to town, settled himself in a room in the village taven, put up his advertisements in the window, and began to handle the toothaches accumulated since his last visit. There might be a month or six months between his visits. If during this interum the tooth got too bad, the family doctor might try his hand at yanking it out. He was wont to preface his preformance by saying he wasn't very good at it, but if he could find his forceps he'd have a go at it. Maybe he couldn't find his forceps and the veterinary or the blacksmith or the village carpenter would have a go at it. Of course there was no anaesthetic, local or generall, to mitigate the pain, and no attempt to do anything but pull the tooth out. If it ached, it was a goner. There was no fixing it up, and nothing to do for the yawning cavity that remained after its removal. Hence there was a good deal of inefficient chewing in those days and a whole train of dyspeptic symptoms in the wake of the early itinerant dentist.

Anent the lack of anaesthetics, one of the old London cries was of "Kind heart the tooth puller."

He tramped about the streets announcing his trade in this way, and his cognomen was considered to be a stroke of genius in allaying the apprehension of the candidates for his ministrations.

These reflections are suggested by the centenary celebration of the anniversary of the founding of the first dental school in the United States, and, indeed, in the world, the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, founded by Drs. Chapin A. Harris and Horace Henry Hayden. The qualifications for entrance were a knowledge of reading and writing and arithmetic. They studied four months and were then loosed upon a suffering world.

First Dental Graduates

There were four in that first graduating class, but they have increased rapidly so now there are 65,000 dentists in the United States. These men have to have at least a high-school education, and they study anatomy, physiology, and bacteriology in courses alongside the medical students. They continue their studies for four years, and the things they learn about helping teeth would make their predecessors of only a hundred years ago green with envy.

It isn't so much the conquest of death-dealing diseases that makes life endurable in our days, but the commoner things — dentistry and spectacles, hearing aids, bathtubs and refrigerators.

In the article tomorrow we will review some of the improvements of modern dentistry.

Dentistry Is Making Rapid Strides Today

Method of Treating Aching Teeth In Other Years Is Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

When you have an aching tooth you may put off tending to it for sentimental reasons—that is for reasons associated with pain and fear. But usually — and always if it gets too bad — you reach for the telephone, and half an hour later you are seated in a high chair in an efficient looking office, a little apprehensive perhaps, but about to have a scientific adjustment of your troubles. The tooth may have to come out, but this is rare. It is likely to have the decayed part drilled out, the nerve irritation relieved, and the cavity filled with a substantial material that is almost as good and tough, if not more so, than your own originall tooth material.

Usually Pulled Tooth

Your great grandparents had no such choices. If they had the toothache they just had to bear it until the traveling toothpuller came to town, settled himself in a room in the village tavern, put up his advertisements in the window, and began to handle the toothaches accumulated since his last visit. There might be a month or six months between his visits. If during this interum the tooth got too bad, the family doctor might try his hand at yanking it out. He was wont to preface his preformance by saying he wasn't very good at it, but if he could find his forceps he'd have a go at it. Maybe he couldn't find his forceps and the veterinary or the blacksmith or the village carpenter would have a go at it. Of course there was no anaesthetic, local or generall, to mitigate the pain, and no attempt to do anything but pull the tooth out. If it ached, it was a goner. There was no fixing it up, and nothing to do for the yawning cavity that remained after its removal. Hence there was a good deal of inefficient chewing in those days and a whole train of dyspeptic symptoms in the wake of the early itinerant dentist.

Anent the lack of anaesthetics, one of the old London cries was of "Kind heart the tooth puller."

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

When the "pinks" in the rock garden finish blooming they usually have a tired, straggly appearance

When this occurs the flower heads and portions of the foliage should be cut off with sharp shears, for pruning of "pinks" at this time frequently encourages a second blooming.

Close on the heels of the blooming period of "pinks" is the ideal time to take cuttings from which to propagate a new supply of plants. Cuttings made from "pinks" in June, as shown in the Garden-Graph, will be ready to set out in a permanent place in the garden by September The cutting ready for September planting is also shown in the accompanying illustration.

Do not permit cuttings from garden pinks to form buds this fall. Snip them off the plants this season and you will be rewarded with a lovely floral display next spring.

Nazi Snipers Forced Dutch Queen's Flight To England

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands minister, declares that Nazi snipers in surrounding houses had fired upon Queen Wilhelmina and her family in their palace gardens and that Nazi authorities had issued orders to "extinguish the House of Orange at any cost."

Commenting on reports that Hollanders had expressed resentment over the queen's flight to England, the minister said that "fifth column" agents had spotted every move of the royal family and that it became impossible to protect them in their own country.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAL

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

When the "pinks" in the rock garden finish blooming they usually have a tired, straggly appearance

When this occurs the flower heads and portions of the foliage should be cut off with sharp shears, for pruning of "pinks" at this time frequently encourages a second blooming.

Close on the heels of the blooming period of "pinks" is the ideal time to take cuttings from which to propagate a new supply of plants. Cuttings made from "pinks" in June, as shown in the Garden-Graph, will be ready to set out in a permanent place in the garden by September. The cutting ready for September planting is also shown in the accompanying illustration.

Do not permit cuttings from garden pinks to form buds this fall. Snip them off the plants this season and you will be rewarded with a lovely floral display next spring.

Nazi Snipers Forced Dutch Queen's Flight To England

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands minister, declares that Nazi snipers in surrounding houses had fired upon Queen Wilhelmina and her family in their palace gardens and that Nazi authorities had issued orders to "extinguish the House of Orange at any cost."

Commenting on reports that Hollanders had expressed resentment over the queen's flight to England, the minister said that "fifth column" agents had spotted every move of the royal family and that it became impossible to protect them in their own country.

Boys and Girls Can Swap Jobs To Advantage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Boys learn how to cook, plan menus and buy meats and groceries, with regard to food values and economy, on the days they swap instruction with the girls at the Curtis Occupational School in Washington, D. C.

Meantime, the girls take up the work the boys have left off, temporarily, which includes how to upholster furniture, do a first class painting job, hang curtains, and do other things around the house which have been regarded as exclusively the work of a willing male.

It's been a splendid thing, this swapping of jobs between the sexes, and it's a long way past the experimental stage. Nothing has been said about its effect on happy homes in the future. But it goes without saying that a girl who can wield a hammer without smashing her fingers, and can actually upholster furniture, is going to make a better housewife than one who sulks until a man comes around to do these things.

With Gusto

As for the boys on their exchange days, they devour the results of their culinary skill with gusto. Their cooking is not the haphazard thing boys do on camping trips. They are even inducted into the subtle art of making sauces, and the butcher who can put across a tough steak or a scraggy piece of mutton on one of these embryo chefs will have to be a hypnotist.

This exchange of work is part of the school's program for well-rounded living. According to the principal, Mrs. R. E. Webb, boys need to understand homemaking just as girls need to be handy with a hammer, paint-brush and chisel. Don't imagine that the girls have no pride in their cooking, sewing, laundry work. In addition, they are taught how to give themselves shampoos and manicures.

Community life is in full swing in the school itself. For instance, in a nearby lower-grade school, a group of girls from Curtis is detailed to teach these little ones how to play games; the boys are responsible for keeping the playground equipment in good condition.

Housing Is Studied

Students who have passed Red Cross first aid tests help to take care of children in the playgrounds. In addition to these things, occupational school students study housing conditions and delve into the survey of industry by visiting shops and plants. The school is decidedly not run on the principal of "all work and no play"—in addition to their school work, the students are taught folk dancing in the mid-week recreation period.

Classes at the Curtis School are representative of the occupational work going on in several other schools of the public school system of the National Capital. This type of work has been arranged that boys and girls might find opportunities for occupational work, and the courses are planned for students who are not likely to go into regular academic work. In occupational classes, provision is made to recognize skill and aptitude for transfer of pupils to the vocational school.

If you ask me for one of the best ways to keep that one marriage in six from going on the rocks, I would unhesitatingly answer that the work done in these schools is very helpful.

No Longer Loves Financee

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Four years ago I began going steady with a girl who is just one year my junior. We were very devoted to each other and saw each other every evening.

Then I accepted a chance to be transferred to a larger city at a very good salary. I fell in love with a girl who works in the same building with me. Of course I haven't told my girl back home, but I think a break is necessary, and I want to tell her in a gentlemanly way that I have ceased to care enough for her to marry. I'm only 22 and want to enjoy myself before settling down.

JUNIOR

I'm afraid there isn't any painless way you can tell this girl that you've been enjoying yourself with other girls.

Going "steady", I find, means different things to different people. A positive engagement, sometimes; again, it's a temporary "best girl" arrangement. If you weren't engaged, to this back-home girl, you can drop off gradually in your letter-writing and I'm sure she will understand. However, if you were really engaged, you'll have to tell her in a straightforward, manly way that you find you were mistaken in your feelings.

For gracious' sake, my dear boy, don't become engaged to any girl at present. You're only 22, a divine age at which all girls are fascinating. Wait a bit longer.

Boeing To Double Capacity of Plant

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Boeing Airplane Co., will double the capacity of its Seattle plant immediately to expedite filling orders on the company's books, P. G. Johnson, president, announced today.

In the last month orders have increased from $26,000,000 to more than $47,000,000, he said.

England's standard of currency value was the silver pound from the days of William the Conqueror until 1816, when it was changed to the golden sovereign.

Boys and Girls Can Swap Jobs To Advantage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Boys learn how to cook, plan menus and buy meats and groceries, with regard to food values and economy, on the days they swap instruction with the girls at the Curtis Occupational School in Washington, D. C.

Meantime, the girls take up the work the boys have left off, temporarily, which includes how to upholster furniture, do a first class painting job, hang curtains, and do other things around the house which have been regarded as exclusively the work of a willing male.

It's been a splendid thing, this swapping of jobs between the sexes, and it's a long way past the experimental stage. Nothing has been said about its effect on happy homes in the future. But it goes without saying that a girl who can wield a hammer without smashing her fingers, and can actually upholster furniture, is going to make a better housewife than one who sulks until a man comes around to do these things.

With Gusto

As for the boys on their exchange days, they devour the results of their culinary skill with gusto. Their cooking is not the haphazard thing boys do on camping trips. They are even inducted into the subtle art of making sauces, and the butcher who can put across a tough steak or a scraggy piece of mutton on one of these embryo chefs will have to be a hypnotist.

This exchange of work is part of the school's program for well-rounded living. According to the principal, Mrs. R. E. Webb, boys need to understand homemaking just as girls need to be handy with a hammer, paint-brush and chisel. Don't imagine that the girls have no pride in their cooking, sewing, laundry work. In addition, they are taught how to give themselves shampoos and manicures.

Community life is in full swing in the school itself. For instance, in a nearby lower-grade school, a group of girls from Curtis is detailed to teach these little ones how to play games; the boys are responsible for keeping the playground equipment in good condition.

Housing Is Studied

Students who have passed Red Cross first aid tests help to take care of children in the playgrounds. In addition to these things, occupational school students study housing conditions and delve into the survey of industry by visiting shops and plants. The school is decidedly not run on the principal of "all work and no play"—in addition to their school work, the students are taught folk dancing in the mid-week recreation period.

Classes at the Curtis School are representative of the occupational work going on in several other schools of the public school system of the National Capital. This type of work has been arranged that boys and girls might find opportunities for occupational work, and the courses are planned for students who are not likely to go into regular academic work. In occupational classes, provision is made to recognize skill and aptitude for transfer of pupils to the vocational school.

If you ask me for one of the best ways to keep that one marriage in six from going on the rocks, I would unhesitatingly answer that the work done in these schools is very helpful.

No Longer Loves Financee

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Four years ago I began going steady with a girl who is just one year my junior. We were very devoted to each other and saw each other every evening.

Then I accepted a chance to be transferred to a larger city at a very good salary. I fell in love with a girl who works in the same building with me. Of course I haven't told my girl back home, but I think a break is necessary, and I want to tell her in a gentlemanly way that I have ceased to care enough for her to marry. I'm only 22 and want to enjoy myself before settling down.

JUNIOR

I'm afraid there isn't any painless way you can tell this girl that you've been enjoying yourself with other girls.

Going "steady", I find, means different things to different people. A positive engagement, sometimes; again, it's a temporary "best girl" arrangement. If you weren't engaged, to this back-home girl, you can drop off gradually in your letter-writing and I'm sure she will understand. However, if you were really engaged, you'll have to tell her in a straightforward, manly way that you find you were mistaken in your feelings.

For gracious' sake, my dear boy, don't become engaged to any girl at present. You're only 22, a divine age at which all girls are fascinating. Wait a bit longer.

Burns Are Fatal to Four-Year-Old Kitzmiller Boy

Death Caused By Explosion Of Gasoline

Harold Coleman Fatally Burned While Watching Men Repair Boat

KITZMILLER, May 23 — Burns suffered Wednesday afternoon when a pail of gasoline exploded caused the death last night of Harold Coleman, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Coleman, Kitzmiller.

The boy was watching Robert Keller and Thomas Cardaro, both of Kitzmiller, clean a boat preparatory to painting it when the accident occurred.

The boat was in a garage across the street from the Coleman boy's home. Keller and Cardaro were using gasoline to clean the boat and the pail of gasoline exploded when Keller tossed away a lighted cigarette stub and it fell into the pail of gas.

Cardaro and Keller ran out of the garage but when they saw the Coleman boy was not with them they ran back for him. Keller picked him up and carried him outside, but the flames had burned most of the boy's clothing off.

The child was rushed to the Potomac Valley hospital in Keyser, where he died at 7:15 last night.

Keller was severely burned on the arms but after receiving treatment at the hospital was able to return home. Cardaro was slightly burned about the legs.

The Coleman boy is survived by his parents and three brothers.

Burns Are Fatal to Four-Year-Old Kitzmiller Boy

Harold Coleman Fatally Burned While Watching Men Repair Boat

KITZMILLER, May 23 — Burns suffered Wednesday afternoon when a pail of gasoline exploded caused the death last night of Harold Coleman, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Coleman, Kitzmiller.

The boy was watching Robert Keller and Thomas Cardaro, both of Kitzmiller, clean a boat preparatory to painting it when the accident occurred.

The boat was in a garage across the street from the Coleman boy's home. Keller and Cardaro were using gasoline to clean the boat and the pail of gasoline exploded when Keller tossed away a lighted cigarette stub and it fell into the pail of gas.

Cardaro and Keller ran out of the garage but when they saw the Coleman boy was not with them they ran back for him. Keller picked him up and carried him outside, but the flames had burned most of the boy's clothing off.

The child was rushed to the Potomac Valley hospital in Keyser, where he died at 7:15 last night.

Keller was severely burned on the arms but after receiving treatment at the hospital was able to return home. Cardaro was slightly burned about the legs.

Forgery Charged In Connection With Petition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—Eugene A. Conniff of Pittsburgh, declared today his purported signature on a Communist ballot petition was a "base forgery" and announced he intended to "track down" the person responsible.

Andrews and Kump To Attend Meeting

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—Both the defeated major candidates of the "statehouse" faction of the Democratic party will be present June 1 when the state committee organizes behind the leadership of Senator M. M. Neely, it developed today.

Former Governor H. G. Kump, who lost the nomination for U. S. Senate to Judge Harley M. Kilgore, candidate of the "federal" faction, said at Elkins he would be at Parkersburg to mingle with Democrats and make it known that "I am neither sulking in anger, nor languishing in despair."

State Chairman R. Carl Andrews, who was defeated for the gubernatorial nomination by Senator Neely, will attend as retiring presiding officer.

Governor Homer A. Holt, it was learned at his office, several months ago made an engagement to speak at the centennial celebration of Bethany college at Bethany and will not attend the committee meeting.

Holt, as leader of the statehouse wing, opposed Neely in the May 14 primary.

Kump in his Elkins statement said there would be no contest over committee organization "so far as I am concerned." He added:

"I accord the Democratic nominee for governor the right to name the chairman of the committee, subject to the approval of the members of the committee, of course, and I shall not intrude myself into that."

Neely, who climaxed a seven-year feud with the statehouse faction by his primary victory, has given no indication yet of his probable choice for state chairman. He said in Washington there were several persons in mind but no decision has been made.

Set For Carefree Smile

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO GIRL who has an offensive breath can qualify for the beauty race. Even if she sits on the sidelines, nobody will sit beside her. No matter how attractive she is to the eye, she is handicapped. She may not be aware of this affliction and it is the duty of some member of her family to enlighten her.

Chronic throat and nose infections may be the cause. An examination by a medical specialist will find out about that. Unhealthy gums and teeth that are in need of the dentist's care are other sources of fetid breath. Intestinal disturbances are under suspicion, too. Girls who like to hold down stools at cocktail bars had better watch out.

No telling how many girls have the currents of their lives changed through lack of mouth hygiene, since an offensive breath puts one outside the social circle and is a dreadful drawback to the young lady who is out for a business career. Suitors don't hang around very long. Romance goes some place else to seek a lady love who takes proper care of her health and her teeth.

After brushing the teeth, rinse the mouth with a salt and soda solution, one half teaspoonful of each to a glass of water.

Waists are in fashion's spotlight. They have to be long and slender. Good idea. Too many women have sloppy-looking mid sections. With frocks and blouses fitted snugly at the waistline, every woman has an incentive to get hers down to normal measurements.

Do the torso twist; it will tighten up your muscles, make fat cells crawl off and die. Lift the hands, try to pull yourself away from your hips, turn the body from side to side, turning the arms as well.

Sit in a straight-backed chair, hands on the hips. Take a deep breath, see how high you can draw up head and torso. Turn the shoulders from side to side.

Man Falls or Leaps to Death

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—Harman Eugene Lushbaugh, 57-year-old refrigerator mechanic on furlough from Western State hospital, Staunton, Va., jumped or fell four stories to his death today, city Patrolman Cecil Weddle reported.

Lushbaugh's body was found on a garage roof below the window of his downtown hotel room.

Papers in Lushbaugh's pocket showed his furlough extended from March 31 to July 27, Weddle said. He is survived by one daughter.

Fayetteville Club Wins Ritter Cup

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—The Ritter cup, presented annually to the club accomplishing the most outstanding work in floral culture, was awarded to the garden study club of Fayetteville today by the West Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs.

Mrs. C. Lloyd Ritter of Huntington donated the prize, which will become the permanent possession of the club winning it three consecutive years.

The 1941 Convention will be held in Wheeling. Mrs. Frank Mullen of Charleston was designated to select candidates for the election there.

REVERSE THE USUAL

THERE ARE many situations in bridge which call for a reversal of customary practice. One of these is in the play of a suit which contains the ace in one hand opposite the queen and at least a couple of guards. Generally it is best to lay down the ace first, then play a small card toward the queen, hoping the king lies where it must be played first. This procedure has the special advantage that it drops the king in cases where it is singleton. It is sometimes better, however, to lead toward the queen on the first trick—when the queen has only one small guard with it or when the ace is needed as a re-entry when the suit is established.

East and West can make five-odd in either red suit, by simply running that many direct tricks, but didn't realize it. They got something for their pains, however, as South fumbled the play of his contract, which can be made. The heart A won, then the heart 6 to the 9 was ruffed by the spade 2. Three tricks then went to the spade A, Q and K, and the crisis was at hand.

If South had now led a small club toward the Q, he would have made his contract. In case West won it, South could have ruffed any return and then run the clubs. If West ducked, the Q would have won, and a club could then have been deliberately lost to West.

But South first led the club A, then a small one. West won and returned a heart, making South use his last trump. A small club was then won by the Q, but dummy had no more to reach South's hand, so the opponents got all but one of the remaining tricks, the one taken by dummy's last trump.

idea, Herbert Hoover suggested that President Roosevelt seek the views of Republican leaders in the House and Senate.

From a high administration official came word that "there ain't going to be any such thing as a coalition cabinet there never was to be."

Asked whether any Republican had been invited into the cabinet, this official said that "no definite offer of a cabinet post has been offered to any Republican."

To the question whether an indefinite offer of a cabinet portfolio had been made, he said that "discussion was as far as it has gone and it never got the point of a direct offer being made."

Senate Acts Quickly

The Senate acted on the naval appropriation bill in record time, voting its approval after less than two hours' discussion. The ballot was a counterpart of yesterday's vote of 76 to 0 by which the Senate passed a $1,823,254,624 appropriation for the army and the army air corps. Both measures go next to the House, where equally speedy action is expected. Between them they include routine annual appropriations and practically all of the emergency appropriations and authorizations recommended by Mr. Roosevelt.

The naval bill included $326,000,000 for the air force, calling for the acquisition of 2,970 planes of which 2,500 are to be of the type used for training pilots. Of the sum, $45,000,000 is to be spent in improving and extending land bases for naval aircraft.

Secretary Morgenthau, in charge of coordinating airplane production, reported that he was obtaining agreements from producers and patent-holders to spread the manufacture of favored types of aircraft and aircraft engines among numerous plants. Attorneys for two large engine companies were at the treasury drawing up contracts which authorize the government to order their particular types of engines from other manufacturers.

After consulting leading industrialists, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins told reporters that many industries may be required to substitute a similar system of pooled standardization for competition in order to prepare the nation's economy for emergencies.

Morgenthau Praises Meade

Morgenthau announced the appointment of Dr. George Jackson Mead, vice chairman of the national advisory council for aviation, at $10,000 a year, to head a commission of army, navy and civilian experts who will decide what types of planes and engines should be produced. He called Mead the greatest living authority on airplane engines.

During the day Morgenthau and Mead consulted Alfred P. Sloan head of General Motors Corporation, which produces Allison airplane engines.

There were these other developments in connection with the defense situation:

(1) Attorney General Jackson said President Roosevelt had prepared a plan many months ago to meet "fifth column" activities, and added that J. Edgar Hoover's Bureau of Investigation would be enlarged if necessary to cope with such efforts. Jackson said such activities could not be dealt with on a local or voluntary organization basis, but that citizens could be helpful by reporting to the FBI "acts, threats or evidence of sabotage, espionage or other disloyal activities."

(2) Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, asked Congress for authority to transform his agency into a "defense financing corporation" if necessary, with authority to make loans for the acquisition of needed raw materials and plant expansion and to provide industry with working capital. Use of the authority might not become necessary, he said.

(3) The busines sadvisory council of the department of commerce, beginning a two-day session largely devoted to defense problems, was called to White House for a late afternoon conference with President Roosevelt.

(4) Louis Kirstein, Boston merchant, who was prominent among those to whom the World War task of providing uniforms for the army was entrusted, discussed industrial production problems with Mr. Roosevelt.

(5) A special House committee quickly and unanimously approved the president's proposal that the bureau of immigration be shifted from the labor to the justice department, to more closely correlate the control of aliens in the country with the anti-espionage and anti-sabotage activities of the bureau of investigation.

(6) Several senators said that, despite the gravity of the Allied crisis, they saw no disposition here to extend any additional assistance. They pointed in corroboration to the Senate foreign relations committee's rejection, 12 to 1, of a proposal that the Allies be sold planes and equipment already delivered to the army and navy.

(7) Senator Gillette (D-Ia) suggested the creation of a "league of American nations" to provide closer cooperation, in connection with war events, than the present "good neighbor policy" has produced.

Problems Involved

The chief problems involved in expanding the nation's plane output, as conversations of the last few days have revealed them, are those concerning the standardization of type, or the selection of the best types to be produced, and the prevention of "bottlenecks" in the output of engines, the supply of skilled labor and machine tool production.

A corps of experts is to be hired at once, Morgenthau said, to decide after consultation with the army, navy and others which types of plane are best suited to America's defense needs. Then the job will be so to standardize them that these planes, which in the past have been turned out by companies holding exclusive rights to them, may be produced by many plants.

"We need a vast expansion of production," he said, "and the only way we can get it is to concentrate our available productive capacity on the best types."

Alf M. Landon, who yesterday suggested a renunciation of third term intentions from President Roosevelt as the price of Republican participation in a coalition directorate for the defense program, called on Secretary Hull for a fifty-minute discussion of foreign affairs. He said later that at the end of the war he would not be opposed to America taking part in the reconstruction of the post-war world.

Hoover, who has opposed a coalition government as a threat to the two-party system, said in Boston that Mr. Roosevelt has a simple means of calling on "the Republican party for its views on transcendental questions of national defense, peace and war." The "simple approach" he said, would be to invite congressional minority leaders into a conference and ask for their views "as a party."

Britain Prepares

least one coast section there was gunfire.

Earlier today when the peril of the hour attained the highest pitch in English history, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, sombre and grave, told a silent House of Commons that hope for Britain's cornered army rests with the counter-attack that General Maxime Weygand, Allied chief is preparing with French divisions along the Aisne river.

"It is too early yet to say what the results of this coastal fighting may be," said Churchill in the shortest message he has yet given on the war situation, "but it evidently carries with it implications of a serious character."

Reports German Gains

He detailed briefly the German gains across the channel, said British communications were threatened, that heavy fighting was going on at Boulogne only twenty-six miles from Folkestone, England, and that Abbeville, France, was in enemy hands.

(It was at Boulogne that Napoleon's grand army spent thirteen months waiting for the French fleet to clear the channel of English sails.)

As in the dark hours of 1915 Britain cast uneasy eyes upon Ireland.

From Dublin came word that nominally neutral Eire having called up all its reserves, is guarding all ports and watching foreign shipping from armed trawlers and torpedo boats.

Parachute invasion and general defense coordination were the subject of Irish conferences.

The "fifth column" defense drive included expulsion of 167 members of the outlawed Irish Republican army from Britain.

Batista Says Cuba Will Help America

HAVANA, May 23 (AP)—"The interests of the United States also wil lbe Cuba's" in case of any danger to the democratic policies of the western hemisphere, Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban "strong man" candidate for president, said tonight in an interview.

Cuba will do whatever is necessary in the way of building fortifications on the island in event of real danger to America.

Navy Working on New Defense Weapon

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Congress learned today that the navy is planning a new type of weapon—an aircraft destroyer—to meet the increased effectiveness of aerial bombing attacks on surface vessels.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said in testimony made public by the Senate appropriations committee that it was the navy's purpose to convert a number of destroyers into anti-aircraft defense vessels. He did not detail how this would be done.

Hitler Writes Letter To Former Kaiser

WITH THE WESTERN GERMAN ARMIES, MAY 24 (Friday)—Adolph Hitler sent a personal letter to former Kaiser Wilhelm when German forces occupied the Netherlands, a high German officer disclosed today.

When Doorn, resident of Wilhelm, was occupied May 14, a Colonel appeared at the castle just after noon with a three-point letter in which Hitler wrote:

1. The German ex-Kaiser and his entourage enjoy the protection of the Germay army.
2. He may remain at Doorn if he chooses.
3. Should the army withdraw, German police will look to his safety.

Mussolini

130,000 Students Volunteer

Some 130,000 university students sent Mussolini a message volunteering to take up arms against Britain and France.

Their offer was saluted by the press as showing that "the whole Italian people is anxious for liberation from the foreigners who hold the gates to the Mediterranean"—Gibraltar, Suez, the Dardanelles.

The question was not whether Italy was going to war, but where and when.

Some thought it might be in the Balkans, where Count Galeazzo Ciano, the foreign minister, visited Albania's frontier with Yugoslavia. Others believed Italy, as well as the Allies and Germany, wants to keep the Balkans a neutral source of supplies.

May Bid for Egypt

A section of foreign opinion thought the Italians might try to gain control of Egypt, with the Suez canal and the fertile Nile valley, and also help Spain regain Gibraltar.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, reported from French North Africa that the situation was "tense," and dispatches from Djibouti said many British subjects had left French Somaliland which, with its port and railroad to Ethiopia, is one of Italy's "aspirations."

One report was that the Germans were trying to get Italian support for an attack on France from the East, perhaps through Switzerland. According to this rumor, Mussolini was supposed to have refused to join such a tactic.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that German's effort to supply Italy's coal needs by rail—about 1,000,000 tons a month—was tying up traffic between the two countries.

Entrance of Italy Question of Days

BERN, Switzerland, May 23 (AP)—Usually circumspect Swiss newspapers said today Italy's entrance into the war was "only a question of days," but Allied and German legation spokesmen agreed it would make no difference in the outcome of the great battle now in progress in northern France.

These officials said they expected a decision in that terrific struggle before the Italians could make their weight felt.

Even should Italy declare war tomorrow, observers said, the French in Somaliland, North Africa, and in the Alps as well as the Allied forces in the near east and Mediterranean could meet the shock until the western decision is reached.

Observers here estimated upwards of forty Allied divisions and a corresponding mass of Germans were being held out of the western battle for the decisive moment.

Allied military experts, despondent for days, appeared cheerful tonight—confident that the Germans had overreached themselves. On the other hand the Germans declared their reserves were moving easily into the western salient.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Bright Future for American Mechanics

ARTHURDALE, W. Va., May 23 (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today told the fourteen members of this homestead's high school graduating class that "you young people must show that democracy is as successful as a totalitarian state can be."

The nation's first lady, here on a two-day visit to northern West Virginia to speak at three commencement exercises and inspect the homestead projects in which she has long been interested, declared:

"Safety of democracy is not armaments but what you make of your citizenship. Your school, your community and your nation, is what you want to make it."

At exercises at Arthurdale and the university High school at Morgantown, she predicted a bright future for persons skilled in mechanical trades and said:

"We have relied on getting too many things from other countries. Now we must make those things ourselves."

Breckenridge Wants To Get into War

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Henry Breckenridge, assistant secretary of war from 1913 to 1916, declared today the United States "should declare war on the Nazi as a mortal enemy of mankind and a menace to our security."

"The destruction of France and England," he added in a statement, "would endanger the independent existence of the United States. Immediately on the heels of this calamity, we should face along the totalitarian conquerors of the world."

of the Republican party on "transcendental questions of national defense, peace and war."

Taking note of current discussion of "coalition" government, he said that cooperation was "feasible" without coalition, and suggested that the president could call into conference the minority leaders of the House and the Senate to obtain the views of Republicans "as a party."

"If there was an agreement," he said, "then the Republicans would certainly be willing to cooperate." He emphasized, however, that he was not advancing this procedure as a suggestion to President Roosevelt.

Future of Granary On Boundary Line Hinges on Old Deed

An injunction suit pertaining to a granary located on or near the boundary lines of property owned by two Rawlings farmers yesterday appeared to hinge principally on the interpretation of a deed drawn up in 1884.

The case was brought by Charles H. Hansel after William C. Collins, his neighbor, had allegedly threatened to dispossess Hansel of a granary used for storage purposes on the disputed boundary.

Walter C. Capper, counsel for Collins, yesterday got out a blackboard to chart up the disputed area. Charles G. Watson, attorney for Hansel, also took his turn at the blackboard and endeavored to show that the boundary line cuts the disputed granary into two equal parts.

Judging from yesterday's testimony, the case evolves principally around the wording of the deed drawn up in 1884.

Associate Judge William A. Huster adjourned the case yesterday afternoon until June 4, when the rival attorneys will present their final arguments.

Twin Counter

from there, cutting the Arras-Bapaume highway;

Then the line drops across the thin German wedge to the Somme river and runs east along the Somme and Aisne to Montmedy.

The French admitted that German columns had filtered through the Allied lines between the Somme and Bapaume toward the sea.

The Germans claim between 500,000 and 1,000,000 British, French and Belgian forces are trapped to the north of the German salient.

Premier Mussolini, still keeping the world guessing as to Italy's intentions amid fiery press assertions that the nation's "hour" is at hand, summoned his imperial defense counsel in a move auguring a possible decision.

Greece reportedly called up new classes of reserves, and more Italian troops were said to be pouring into Albania.

Fierce Battle in Flanders

The fiercest fighting of the fourteen-day-old war in the west raged over Flanders fields as German rapier thrusts slashed to the English channel at Abbeville and Boulogne, the latter only 26 miles across the strait of Dover from England.

The Germans said it was "quite probable" Boulogne had been captured. Prime Minister Churchill, in a two-minute war report to Parliament, admitted "heavy fighting" had occurred "around and in Boulogne" but added it was too early to ascertain the outcome.

Churchill disclosed that Nazi armored troops, striking swiftly far in advance of their main infantry support, had recaptured Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme river estuary, twelve miles from the English channel.

The bitter conflict—flaming over the graves of American soldiers who died in the 1914-18 "war to end war" saw the reorganized French armies under Generalissimo Maxime Weygand struggling to reunite their northern and central forces and cut off the Nazi spearhead to the sea.

Hope to Trick Germans

If successful, the French would not only engulf the German salient in a pear-shaped sector roughly hemmed by Abbeville, Cambrai and St. Quentin. It would also lighten the peril of between 500,000 and 1,000,000 Allied troops "pocketed" in northern France and Belgium.

The Germans admitted that the "real battle" against England—the prime target of Adolf Hitler's fury—cannot begin until the Allied "pocket" extending from Abbeville to Ostend has been smashed.

"In view of the strong forces encircled there, it will not be done without heavy fighting," said DNB, the official German news agency.

Across the channel from the main battle scene, Prime Minister Churchill took energetic steps to guard against a disastrous "fifth column" assault on England.

Scotland Yard seized Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the Fascist "British Union," arrested Captain Archibald H. M. Ramsay, Conservative member of Parliament, and others suspected of action "prejudicial to the security of the state." Only a few hours earlier, Parliament had rushed through a death penalty for treason.

The House of Commons was informed that the government was apprehensively "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion from Irish bases.

Oldest Postmaster To Retire June 30

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — "Miss Mollie" Stewart, oldest postmaster in the nation in point of service, will relinquish her position in Oxford, Md., June 30.

Selection of the date for her to turn over to a successor duties she first assumed in 1877 was announced today by the postoffice department.

"Miss Mollie" first became postmaster when a few stamps and a few letters a day constituted the entire business of the Oxford postoffice.

During her term it has grown steadily to a busy small town postal center.

Only a few weeks ago she successfully passed a civil service examination—they didn't have such examinations when she became custodian of the mails in Oxford.

With a passing grade her name went to the Senate and her new appointment was confirmed so that she might be eligible for retirement under civil service regulations.

Selection of her successor, the post office department reported, must await preparation of a list of persons eligible for the position.

Youth, 18, Jailed On Burglary Charge

An 18-year-old Eckhart youth was ordered held for action of the October grand jury yesterday in Trial Magistrates court after he confessed to breaking and entering a store with intent to commit a felony.

The youth, Roy E. Felker, waived a preliminary hearing and was ordered committed to the county jail in default of $500 bond.

Falker is charged with breaking into the store-saloon of Albert Starkey, also of Eckhart, Monday night and stealing some money and a quantity of merchandise, including cigarettes. He broke into a music box in the establishment and took a number of nickels, authorities said.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle investigated and preferred the charge.

$4,500 Verdict Stands in Death Of Mary Reynolds

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Reynolds of Cumberland, won a final victory yesterday in their suit for $4,500 damages for the death of their daughter, Mary, in an automobile crash in November, 1938.

The Maryland Court of Appeals over-ruled a motion by counsel for Ray H. Coffman, Cumberland barber, and Paul Powers, Hancock tavern proprietor, for a re-argument of the case.

The Court of Appeals had affirmed the damage award in March when it was appealed from Washington county Circuit court and closed the door yesterday to a review.

The damages had been assessed jointly against Coffman and Powers. Coffman was driving Power's car when it crashed into a guard-rail on U. S. Route 40 on Fairview mountain, fatally injuring Miss Reynolds.

Edward J. Ryan, of Cumberland and Frostburg, and former Attorney-General William Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, were counsel for the plaintiffs.

Appeal Court Upholds Huster's Decision On 'Temporary' Deed

The Court of Appeals yesterday sustained the decision handed down in Circuit court here by Associate Judge William A. Huster denying Eugene A. Kelley a court order to force his niece, Edith Genevieve Kelley, to reconvey to him title to property at 211 Pennsylvania avenue.

Kelley had testified that he deeded the property to his niece temporarily in order to prevent his estranged wife from obtaining any interest in it, pending settlement of their divorce case. Miss Kelley denied this, claiming it was deeded to her without any strings attached.

Judge Huster ruled that even though Kelley's contention was correct, he had no case in equity, because he himself was guilty of an attempted fraud in seeking to deprive his wife of her dower rights in the property.

Attorneys Clarence Lippel and Harold E. Naughton represented Miss Kelley, while Attorneys Albert A. Doub Sr., and Albert A. Doub Jr. were counsel for Kelley.

Youth Ordered To Stay Away from Theater

Stay away from the Strand theater was the order handed to James Klosterman, 16, of 426 Columbia street, yesterlay in Police court when he was given a suspended sentence on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Klosterman was arrested Wednesday night after he sneaked into the theater and became noisy during the show.

'Careless Driver' Pays, But Wasn't Driving

A trucker who was charged with careless driving even though he wasn't in his truck when it "ran away" chose to forfeit $10 bond yesterday rather than stand trial.

He was Robert Mars, of Bennettsville, S. C., who was arrested Tuesday afternoon after his truck-trailer crashed into two cars near Central YMCA on Baltimore street. The truck-trailer was parked on the hill at the top of Baltimore street when the brakes slipped.

Shoe Laundry Proposed As Cure-All for Woes, Also To Make Money

An advocate of laundered shoes who claims tired dogs cause considerable trouble yesterday asked the aid of the mayor and city council in getting a shoe laundry started in Cumber'and.

Nervousness, irritability, bad feeling, forgetfulness, verbal and fistic encounters, divorces and even killings are attributed to tired tootsies by Joseph A. Shires, of Denver, Col.

In asking aid in getting his business launched, Shires explains his efforts to cure tired feet are purely unselfish and utterly humanitarian although he adds that such a business is a good way to make some easy money fast.

Soap, says Shires, should be cut finely into the shoes and water applied freely. Afterwards, the shoes should be stuffed with soft rags or paper to absorb the water and the shoe dried the best way possible. Such a shoe should be worn within eight hours to prevent wrinkling.

Feet should be washed daily, Shires contends, and socks changed daily. It is also a good idea to massage feet with soap and water or alcohol, he adds.

His proposition, he confidently predicts, would advertise Cumberland no end.

A corps of experts is to be hired at once, Morgenthau said, to decide after consultation with the army, navy and others which types of plane are best suited to America's defense needs. Then the job will be so to standardize them that these planes, which in the past have been turned out by companies holding exclusive rights to them, may be produced by many plants.

"We need a vast expansion of production," he said, "and the only way we can get it is to concentrate our available productive capacity on the best types."

Alf M. Landon, who yesterday suggested a renunciation of third term intentions from President Roosevelt as the price of Republican participation in a coalition directorate for the defense program, called on Secretary Hull for a fifty-minute discussion of foreign affairs. He said later that at the end of the war he would not be opposed to America taking part in the reconstruction of the post-war world.

Hoover, who has opposed a coalition government as a threat to the two-party system, said in Boston that Mr. Roosevelt has a simple means of calling on "the Republican party for its views on transcendental questions of national defense, peace and war." The "simple approach" he said, would be to invite congressional minority leaders into a conference and ask for their views "as a party."

Britain Prepares

least one coast section there was gunfire.

Earlier today when the peril of the hour attained the highest pitch in English history, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, sombre and grave, told a silent House of Commons that hope for Britain's cornered army rests with the counter-attack that General Maxime Weygand, Allied chief is preparing with French divisions along the Aisne river.

"It is too early yet to say what the results of this coastal fighting may be," said Churchill in the shortest message he has yet given on the war situation, "but it evidently carries with it implications of a serious character."

Reports German Gains

He detailed briefly the German gains across the channel, said British communications were threatened, that heavy fighting was going on at Boulogne only twenty-six miles from Folkestone, England, and that Abbeville, France, was in enemy hands.

(It was at Boulogne that Napoleon's grand army spent thirteen months waiting for the French fleet to clear the channel of English sails.)

As in the dark hours of 1915 Britain cast uneasy eyes upon Ireland.

From Dublin came word tha nominally neutral Eire having called up all its reserves, is guarding all ports and watching foreign shipping from armed trawlers and torpedo boats.

Parachute invasion and general defense coordination were the subject of Irish conferences.

The "fifth column" defense drive included expulsion of 167 members of the outlawed Irish Republican army from Britain.

Batista Says Cuba Will Help America

HAVANA, May 23 (AP)—"The interests of the United States also wil lbe Cuba's" in case of any danger to the democratic policies of the western hemisphere, Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban "strong man" candidate for president, said tonight in an interview.

Cuba will do whatever is necessary in the way of building fortifications on the island in event of real danger to America.

Navy Working on New Defense Weapon

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—Congress learned today that the navy is planning a new type of weapon—an aircraft destroyer—to meet the increased effectiveness of aerial bombing attacks on surface vessels.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said in testimony made public by the Senate appropriations committee that it was the navy's purpose to convert a number of destroyers into anti-aircraft defense vessels. He did not detail how this would be done.

Hitler Writes Letter To Former Kaiser

WITH THE WESTERN GERMAN ARMIES, MAY 24 (Friday) —Adolph Hitler sent a personal letter to former Kaiser Wilhelm when German forces occupied the Netherlands, a high German officer disclosed today.

When Doorn, resident of Wilhelm, was occupied May 14, a Colonel appeared at the castle just after noon with a three-point letter in which Hitler wrote:

1. The German ex-Kaiser and his entourage enjoy the protection of the Germay army.

2. He may remain at Doorn if he chooses.

3. Should the army withdraw, German police will look to his safety.

Mussolini

"renewing hateful persecutions" of Italians living in the protectorate.

130,000 Students Volunteer

Some 130,000 university students sent Mussolini a message volunteering to take up arms against Britain and France.

Their offer was saluted by the press as showing that "the whole Italian people is anxious for liberation from the foreigners who hold the gates to the Mediterranean"—Gibraltar, Suez, the Dardanelles.

The question was not whether Italy was going to war, but where and when.

Some thought it might be in the Balkans, where Count Galeazzo Ciano, the foreign minister, visited Albania's frontier with Yugoslavia. Others believed Italy, as well as the Allies and Germany, wants to keep the Balkans a neutral source of supplies.

May Bid for Egypt

A section of foreign opinion thought the Italians might try to gain control of Egypt, with the Suez canal and the fertile Nile valley, and also help Spain regain Gibraltar.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, reported from French North Africa that the situation was "tense," and dispatches from Djibouti said many British subjects had left French Somaliland which, with its port and railroad to Ethiopia, is one of Italy's "aspirations."

One report was that the Germans were trying to get Italian support for an attack on France from the East, perhaps through Switzerland. According to this rumor, Mussolini was supposed to have refused to join such a tactic.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that German's effort to supply Italy's coal needs by rail—about 1,000,000 tons a month—was tying up traffic between the two countries.

Entrance of Italy Question of Days

BERN, Switzerland, May 23 (AP)—Usually circumspect Swiss newspapers said today Italy's entrance into the war was "only a question of days," but Allied and German legation spokesmen agreed it would make no difference in the outcome of the great battle now in progress in northern France.

These officials said they expected a decision in that terrific struggle before the Italians could make their weight felt.

Even should Italy declare war tomorrow, observers said, the French in Somaliland, North Africa, and in the Alps as well as the Allied forces in the near east and Mediterranean could meet the shock until the western decision is reached.

Observers here estimated upwards of forty Allied divisions and a corresponding mass of Germans were being held out of the western battle for the decisive moment.

Allied military experts, despondent for days, appeared cheerful tonight—confident that the Germans had overreached themselves. On the other hand the Germans declared their reserves were moving easily into the western salient.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Bright Future for American Mechanics

ARTHURDALE, W. Va., May 23 (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today told the fourteen members of this homestead's high school graduating class that "you young people must show that democracy is as successful as a totalitarian state can be."

The nation's first lady, here on a two-day visit to northern West Virginia to speak at three commencement exercises and inspect the homestead projects in which she has long been interested, declared:

"Safety of democracy is not armaments but what you make of your citizenship. Your school, your community and your nation, is what you want to make it."

At exercises at Arthurdale and the university High school at Morgantown, she predicted a bright future for persons skilled in mechanical trades and said:

"We have relied on getting too many things from other countries. Now we must make those things ourselves."

Breckenridge Wants To Get into War

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Henry Breckenridge, assistant secretary of war from 1913 to 1916, declared today the United States "should declare war on the Nazi as a mortal enemy of mankind and a menace to our security."

"The destruction of France and England," he added in a statement, "would endanger the independent existence of the United States. Immediately on the heels of this calamity, we should face along the totalitarian conquerors of the world."

of the Republican party on "transcendental questions of national defense, peace and war."

Taking note of current discussion of "coalition" government, he said that cooperation was "feasible" without coalition, and suggested that the president could call into conference the minority leaders of the House and the Senate to obtain the views of Republicans "as a party."

"If there was an agreement," he said, "then the Republicans would certainly be willing to cooperate." He emphasized, however, that he was not advancing this procedure as a suggestion to President Roosevelt.

Future of Granary On Boundary Line Hinges on Old Deed

An injunction suit pertaining to a granary located on or near the boundary lines of property owned by two Rawlings farmers yesterday appeared to hinge principally on the interpretation of a deed drawn up in 1884.

The case was brought by Charles H. Hansel after William C. Collins, his neighbor, had allegedly threatened to dispossess Hansel of a granary used for storage purposes on the disputed boundary.

Walter C. Capper, counsel for Collins, yesterday got out a blackboard to chart up the disputed area. Charles G. Watson, attorney for Hansel, also took his turn at the blackboard and endeavored to show that the boundary line cuts the disputed granary into two equal parts.

Judging from yesterday's testimony, the case evolves principally around the wording of the deed drawn up in 1884.

Associate Judge William A. Huster adjourned the case yesterday afternoon until June 4, when the rival attorneys will present their final arguments.

Twin Counter

from there, cutting the Arras-Bapaume highway;

Then the line drops across the thin German wedge to the Somme river and runs east along the Somme and Aisne to Montmedy.

The French admitted that German columns had filtered through the Allied lines between the Somme and Bapaume toward the sea.

The Germans claim between 500,000 and 1,000,000 British, French and Belgian forces are trapped to the north of the German salient.

Premier Mussolini, still keeping the world guessing as to Italy's intentions amid fiery press assertions that the nation's "hour" is at hand, summoned his imperial defense counsel in a move auguring a possible decision.

Greece reportedly called up new classes of reserves, and more Italian troops were said to be pouring into Albania.

Fierce Battle in Flanders

The fiercest fighting of the fourteen-day-old war in the west raged over Flanders fields as German rapier thrusts slashed to the English channel at Abbeville and Boulogne, the latter only 26 miles across the strait of Dover from England.

The Germans said it was "quite probable" Boulogne had been captured. Prime Minister Churchill, in a two-minute war report to Parliament, admitted "heavy fighting" had occurred "around and in Boulogne" but added it was too early to ascertain the outcome.

Churchill disclosed that Nazi armored troops, striking swiftly far in advance of their main infantry support, had recaptured Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme river estuary, twelve miles from the English channel.

The bitter conflict—flaming over the graves of American soldiers who died in the 1914-18 "war to end war" saw the reorganized French armies under Generalissimo Maxime Weygand struggling to reunite their northern and central forces and cut off the Nazi spearhead to the sea.

Hope to Trick Germans

If successful, the French would not only engulf the German salient in a pear-shaped sector roughly hemmed by Abbeville, Cambrai and St. Quentin. It would also lighten the peril of between 500,000 and 1,000,000 Allied troops "pocketed" in northern France and Belgium.

The Germans admitted that the "real battle" against England—the prime target of Adolf Hitler's fury—cannot begin until the Allied "pocket" extending from Abbeville to Ostend has been smashed.

"In view of the strong forces encircled there, it will not be done without heavy fighting," said DNB, the official German news agency.

Across the channel from the main battle scene, Prime Minister Churchill took energetic steps to guard against a disastrous "fifth column" assault on England.

Scotland Yard seized Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the Fascist "British Union," arrested Captain Archibald H. M. Ramsay, Conservative member of Parliament, and others suspected of action "prejudicial to the security of the state." Only a few hours earlier, Parliament had rushed through a death penalty for treason.

The House of Commons was informed that the government was apprehensively "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion from Irish bases.

Oldest Postmaster To Retire June 30

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — "Miss Mollie" Stewart, oldest postmaster in the nation in point of service, will relinquish her position in Oxford, Md., June 30.

Selection of the date for her to turn over to a successor duties she first assumed in 1877 was announced today by the postoffice department.

"Miss Mollie" first became postmaster when a few stamps and a few letters a day constituted the entire business of the Oxford postoffice.

During her term it has grown steadily to a busy small town postal center.

Only a few weeks ago she successfully passed a civil service examination—they didn't have such examinations when she became custodian of the mails in Oxford.

With a passing grade her name went to the Senate and her new appointment was confirmed so that she might be eligible for retirement under civil service regulations.

Selection of her successor, the post office department reported, must await preparation of a list of persons eligible for the position.

Youth, 18, Jailed On Burglary Charge

An 18-year-old Eckhart youth was ordered held for action of the October grand jury yesterday in Trial Magistrates court after he confessed to breaking and entering a store with intent to commit a felony.

The youth, Roy E. Felker, waived a preliminary hearing and was ordered committed to the county jail in default of $500 bond.

Falker is charged with breaking into the store-saloon of Albert Starkey, also of Eckhart, Monday night and stealing some money and a quantity of merchandise, including cigarettes. He broke into a music box in the establishment and took a number of nickels, authorities said.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle investigated and preferred the charge.

$4,500 Verdict Stands in Death Of Mary Reynolds

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Reynolds, of Cumberland, won a final victory yesterday in their suit for $4,500 damages for the death of their daughter, Mary, in an automobile crash in November, 1938.

The Maryland Court of Appeals over-ruled a motion by counsel for Ray H. Coffman, Cumberland barber, and Paul Powers, Hancock tavern proprietor, for a re-argument of the case.

The Court of Appeals had affirmed the damage award in March when it was appealed from Washington county Circuit court and closed the door yesterday to a review.

The damages had been assessed jointly against Coffman and Powers. Coffman was driving Power's car when it crashed into a guard-rail on U. S. Route 40 on Fairview mountain, fatally injuring Miss Reynolds.

Edward J. Ryan, of Cumberland and Frostburg, and former Attorney-General William Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, were counsel for the plaintiffs.

Bess Paterson Wins College Beauty Contest

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 23 (AP)—Blonde, blue-eyed Bess Paterson of Towson was announced winner today of the annual beauty contest sponsored by the Terrapin, university of Maryland student year book.

Five other coeds were named to the winner's "court" by Joseph Schiff, nationally-known portrait photographer who judged the beauties.

Miss Paterson is president of the Women's league, women's editor of the Diamondback, student newspaper publication, member of Mortar Board, national women's honor society, and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The "court" is composerd of Sara Ann Vaiden, Baltimore; Barbara Boose, Washington; Erla Marshall, Hyattsville; Marjorie Cook, University Park, and Beverly Smith, Nutley, N. J.

Appeal Court Upholds Huster's Decision On 'Temporary' Deed

The Court of Appeals yesterday sustained the decision handed down in Circuit court here by Associate Judge William A. Huster denying Eugene A. Kelley a court order to force his niece, Edith Genevieve Kelley, to reconvey to him title to property at 211 Pennsylvania avenue.

Kelley had testified that he deeded the property to his niece temporarily in order to prevent his estranged wife from obtaining any interest in it, pending settlement of their divorce case. Miss Kelley denied this, claiming it was deeded to her without any strings attached.

Judge Huster ruled that even though Kelley's contention was correct, he had no case in equity, because he himself was guilty of an attempted fraud in seeking to deprive his wife of her dower rights in the property.

Attorneys Clarence Lippel and Harold E. Naughton represented Miss Kelley, while Attorneys Albert A. Doub Sr., and Albert A. Doub Jr. were counsel for Kelley.

Youth Ordered To Stay Away from Theater

Stay away from the Strand theater was the order handed to James Klosterman, 16, of 426 Columbia street, yesterday in Police court when he was given a suspended sentence on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Klosterman was arrested Wednesday night after he sneaked into the theater and became noisy during the show.

'Careless Driver' Pays, But Wasn't Driving

A trucker who was charged with careless driving even though he wasn't in his truck when it "ran away" chose to forfeit $10 bond yesterday rather than stand trial.

He was Robert Mars, of Bennettsville, S. C., who was arrested Tuesday afternoon after his truck-trailer crashed into two cars near Central YMCA on Baltimore street. The truck-trailer was parked on the hill at the top of Baltimore street when the brakes slipped.

Shoe Laundry Proposed As Cure-All for Woes, Also To Make Money

An advocate of laundered shoes who claims tired dogs cause considerable trouble yesterday asked the aid of the mayor and city council in getting a shoe laundry started in Cumberland.

Nervousness, irritability, bad feeling, forgetfulness, verbal and fistic encounters, divorces and even killings are attributed to tired tootsies by Joseph A. Shires, of Denver, Col.

In asking aid in getting his business launched, Shires explains his efforts to cure tired feet are purely unselfish and utterly humanitarian although he adds that such a business is a good way to make some easy money fast.

Soap, says Shires, should be cut finely into the shoes and water applied freely. Afterwards, the shoes should be stuffed with soft rags or paper to absorb the water and the shoe dried the best way possible. Such a shoe should be worn within eight hours to prevent wrinkling.

Feet should be washed daily, Shires contends, and socks changed daily. It is also a good idea to massage feet with soap and water or alcohol, he adds.

His proposition, he confidently predicts, would advertise Cumberland no end.

Happiness, C. O. D.

by OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER NINETEEN

WHEN THEY weren't interrupted by spontaneous conversation and fun, rehearsals for "Maid to Measure" went forward steadily on Friday and Saturday. Bill Bailey and Gayle took turns at directing and acting.

"You can act some, but you can direct better," Bill told Gayle. "You'll get by in the cast, though."

She realized the truth of that. Bill was really talented at dramatics. He just seemed to sense what was good, or how to make it good. He could change a carelessly written line or two in the comedy script and make it sparkle more than the author had. He could originate stage "business"—little movements for the actors to make, short asides, life-like exclamations and expressions. He could step up stage and demonstrate what he meant, also.

Gayle, a natural leader, could help others develop themselves, but became a trifle stiff when in character herself. She had the lead feminine role, and Bill said she would improve before an audience.

That young man did a lot of rehearsing with her. The script called for him to kiss her perfunctorily twice, and very lovingly and lingeringly on another occasion. This latter he deemed worthy of much practice.

"Stop it, Bill Bailey!" Gayle barked at him once, while everybody else laughed at them. "You are supposed to kiss me just once in this scene. You kissed me three times!"

He grinned, still holding her in his arms there on the stage. "You kissed me back."

"I—well, it was before I thought. I do not allow boys to kiss me. I am quite serious about it. I intend to be an old maid, or enter a convent or something. Men are terrible." Her expression quite belied her words, but she tried to be severe.

"Terrible," Bill echoed, clucking. "Ought to be a law against 'em. Then another girl could take my part and kiss you—just like this . . .!" He stole another kiss and wisely fled.

Gayle threw a book at him—only missile at hand—and gave chase. The other six girls shrieked in laughter. Jeremy Tucker, who hadn't been sure how much of all this was kidding, looked somewhat alarmed. Bill ran into the first row of empty chairs, fell and came up running and laughing still. Gayle pushed a chair at him and backed him into a corner.

For a hilarious moment they wrestled there with a chair held between them, and across the great room Graham the butler came in, his middle-aged and dignified mouth forming an "O." When he perceived that the bedlam did not entail any bloodshed, after all, he withdrew. He went to Wallace, the cook, for consolation about it.

"Trouble wit' you is, Graham, you try to buttle ever-body, see?" Wallace grinned at him. "Now me, I ain't so damned old as you and the old gent and that Weems. I ain't even 50. Let them kids play. Wasn't you ever a kid?"

Graham looked as if the thought was inconceivable, but he said no more. He went discreetly to another part of the mansion, where things were less irregular.

Immediately after noon on Friday Bill Bailey left The Oaks. He had also gone away on Thursday afternoon, offering no explanation. Gayle wondered a little about it, thinking that he should have stayed to supervise the rehearsals as only he could do. And on Saturday about 4:30 it evidently occurred to him that his absences ought to be explained.

"Listen, Gayle," he spoke to her in private, "have you heard anything at all from the police? Or from—from your Maudie, or whatever her name is?"

"Her real name is Mrs. Holmquist. I talked to her again about the robbery last night, but she said there was absolutely nothing to go on. The detectives are watching the pawn shops and other places where a thief might sell a piece of jewelry, she said. She has to have—what is it?—for the courts."

"Evidence. I know. It takes proof. I think I know who's guilty myself, but—"

"Bill! You do?"

"I said I think. Think. I won't say until I'm sure. I've been doing some eliminating, and I ought to know for certain tonight."

Gayle looked earnestly at him.

"You won't—tell me? . . . Not anything, Bill? After all, I—I—"

She paused, and he saw that her face showed deep concern. Then she resumed her sentence.

"—I was one of the seven girls who could have stolen the bracelet, Bill."

"Oh, for Pete's sake, Gayle!" Consternation was in his tone now. "Have you been worried—about me—us—suspecting you? You, Gayle?" He grabbed her by the elbows and shook her a little, quite unconsciously. "No, no, Gayle! You're not one of them. You're wonderful! I never dreamed you were worried about—"

"I am one of the seven girls employed here, Bill. And I am just as much a stranger to you as they are. We were hired at the same time, or within the same morning, remember. You know nothing about me, really."

"But I do! I know you are a fine somebody and that I—oh, lordy, Gayle!"

He couldn't say what he felt. He wanted to hold her close and kiss her and pour out the fact that he loved her. It was something that he had kept buried within him this week by sheer force. It was a fact that he must continue to keep bottled up within him, he knew. And he was entirely too penniless to make serious love to any girl.

He realized, looking at her there in this moment, that the best thing for Gayle Dixon to do was to build up the promised romance between her and Jeremy Tucker. Almost any year now Jeremy would be exceedingly wealthy. He had abundant money already, in fact. He was an honest sort, however shy. He was responding to Gayle's and Bill's subtle "drawing out" treatment, so that in a short time he would be socially at ease. On the whole, Bill could see nothing wrong with him, so that it was distinctly a break for Gayle to have such a young man attracted to her. And that Jeremy was definitely attracted to Gayle, Bill had already observed.

Bill dropped his hands from her arms all at once, and turned to go.

"There's nothing for you personally to be concerned about, Gayle," he said now, quietly. "If you stole that diamond bracelet, then I stole the city hall. But it's sort of our responsibility, I figure, and so I'm trying to get at the bottom of things. Police have a way of slipping up on these matters, history proves."

"Thank you, Bill. Do whatever you think is right. I trust you. Are you—going out on this matter now?"

"Yes. If it's okay."

"It is. I can keep rehearsals going for you. I want us to have a full dress rehearsal tonight. It's Saturday, and it's our last chance."

"Tonight? Say, Gayle, do that! It'll give me a chance to—look, keep the girls all here, for dinner and afterward. Set rehearsal for 9 p. m. I can get back by then."

Bill hastened away then. For his necessary trips to town and elsewhere he had taken to using one of the three Merrifield cars, a three-year-old, but still powerful, sedan, driving it himself. Bill often wondered why Mr. Merrifield kept three cars, but not even the chauffeur had been able to say.

He drove about six miles, parked and went into a small shop that made and sold keys. He purchased six assorted kinds of skeleton keys. He had already inspected the lock for which he wanted them, but he wasn't sure of the type needed, being quite inexperienced at these things.

Then he drove another two miles or so to the poorer section of town, parked again and went to a restaurant for a 40-cent dinner. He had to stall for about an hour until darkness had settled down, and when he came out he saw that street lights were on. He wanted to move while most people were at dinner in their homes, and walking up the street he saw that he had timed himself correctly.

Presently he turned quietly and entered an apartment house hall. The main door was not locked—this was hardly more than a tenement, with no doorman or other such luxury. Right and left of the hall were closed doors through which came the sound of people, of radios, the sundry noises of living. He went on, quietly, up two flights of stairs. He saw nobody.

On the third floor he paused before a room door to glance around. He was still quite alone. No light shone through the keyhole or cracks at this door.

Quietly he inserted one key, then another. The fourth opened the lock. He turned the knob and slipped into the darkness inside, closing the door behind him. Then he took a flashlight from his pocket and set to work.

His heart was thumping some. He wasn't used to this sort of thing.

IN HIS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS

King Leopold of Belgium, like his father King Albert, in 1914, has taken personal command of his country's armed forces in their battle against German invaders. The young king is shown leading his own company of grenadiers through the streets of Brussels.

Urges That Congress Authorize Military Aid to Allies

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commander of the 27th U. S. division in Belgium and France during the World war, is urging that Congress authorize immediate military aid to the Allies "with or without war declaration."

O'Ryan suggested sending aircraft carriers, transports, protecting naval vessels and at least 2,000 bomber and fighter planes with pilots.

He expressed his views in a telegram to the Veterans Civil Service League, after receiving a message from 600 members whom he led in 1918 offering to fight under him again.

Relief Expenditures For Allegany Show Increase in April

BALTIMORE, May 23 (AP)—Cost of direct relief in Maryland dropped sharply last month, heading a general downward trend in expenditures for all forms of public assistance in the state.

J. Milton Patterson, department of public welfare director issued a monthly statistical statement today showing $199,837 spent for direct relief in April compared with $231,483 expended in March—a reduction of more than thirteen percent.

Total cases on the direct relief roles likewise dropped from 10,091 in March to 9,496 last month, and an even greater decline was noted in applications filed.

Obligations incurred for all types of public assistance in the state in April amounted to $774,933, a decrease of $36,984 from March figures.

Only four counties ran contrary to the downward trend. Allegany, Calvert, Dorchester and Montgomery all reported increases in the number of cases assisted and in total expenditures.

Happiness, C. O. D.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

WHEN THEY weren't interrupted by spontaneous conversation and fun, rehearsals for "Maid to Measure" went forward steadily on Friday and Saturday. Bill Bailey and Gayle took turns at directing and acting.

"You can act some, but you can direct better," Bill told Gayle. "You'll get by in the cast, though."

She realized the truth of that. Bill was really talented at dramatics. He just seemed to sense what was good, or how to make it good. He could change a carelessly written line or two in the comedy script and make it sparkle more than the author had. He could originate stage "business"—little movements for the actors to make, short asides, life-like exclamations and expressions. He could step up stage and demonstrate what he meant, also.

Gayle, a natural leader, could help others develop themselves, but became a trifle stiff when in character herself. She had the lead feminine role, and Bill said she would improve before an audience.

That young man did a lot of rehearsing with her. The script called for him to kiss her perfunctorily twice, and very lovingly and lingeringly on another occasion. This latter he deemed worthy of much practice.

"Stop it, Bill Bailey!" Gayle barked at him once, while everybody else laughed at them. "You are supposed to kiss me just once in this scene. You kissed me three times!"

He grinned, still holding her in his arms there on the stage. "You kissed me back."

"I—well, it was before I thought. I do not allow boys to kiss me. I am quite serious about it. I intend to be an old maid, or enter a convent or something. Men are terrible." Her expression quite belied her words, but she tried to be severe.

"Terrible," Bill echoed, clucking. "Ought to be a law against 'em. Then another girl could take my part and kiss you—just like this . . .!" He stole another kiss and wisely fled.

Gayle threw a book at him—only missile at hand—and gave chase. The other six girls shrieked in laughter. Jeremy Tucker, who hadn't been sure how much of all this was kidding, looked somewhat alarmed. Bill ran into the first row of empty chairs, fell and came up running and laughing still. Gayle pushed a chair at him and backed him into a corner.

For a hilarious moment they wrestled there with a chair held between them, and across the great room Graham the butler came in, his middle-aged and dignified mouth forming an "O." When he perceived that the bedlam did not entail any bloodshed, after all, he withdrew. He went to Wallace, the cook, for consolation about it.

"Trouble wit' you is, Graham, you try to buttle ever-body, see?" Wallace grinned at him. "Now me, I ain't so damned old as you and the old gent and that Weems. I ain't even 50. Let them kids play. Wasn't you ever a kid?"

Graham looked as if the thought was inconceivable, but he said no more. He went discreetly to another part of the mansion, where things were less irregular.

Immediately after noon on Friday Bill Bailey left The Oaks. He had also gone away on Thursday afternoon, offering no explanation. Gayle wondered a little about it, thinking that he should have stayed to supervise the rehearsals as only he could do. And on Saturday about 4:30 it evidently occurred to him that his absences ought to be explained.

"Listen, Gayle," he spoke to her in private, "have you heard anything at all from the police? Or from—from your Maudie, or whatever her name is?"

"Her real name is Mrs. Holmquist. I talked to her again about the robbery last night, but she said there was absolutely nothing to go on. The detectives are watching the pawn shops and other places where a thief might sell a piece of jewelry, she said. She has to have—what is it?—for the courts."

"Evidence. I know. It takes proof. I think I know who's guilty myself, but—"

"Bill! You do?"

"I said I think. Think. I won't say until I'm sure. I've been doing some eliminating, and I ought to know for certain tonight."

Gayle looked earnestly at him.

"You won't—tell me? . . . Not anything, Bill? After all, I—I—"

She paused, and he saw that her face showed deep concern. Then she resumed her sentence.

"—I was one of the seven girls who could have stolen the bracelet, Bill."

"Oh, for Pete's sake, Gayle!" Consternation was in his tone now. "Have you been worried—about me—us—suspecting you? You, Gayle?" He grabbed her by the elbows and shook her a little, quite unconsciously. "No, no, Gayle! You're not one of them. You're wonderful! I never dreamed you were worried about—"

"I am one of the seven girls employed here, Bill. And I am just as much a stranger to you as they are. We were hired at the same time, or within the same morning, remember. You know nothing about me, really."

"But I do! I know you are a fine somebody and that I—oh, lordy, Gayle!"

He couldn't say what he felt. He wanted to hold her close and kiss her and pour out the fact that he loved her. It was something that he had kept buried within him this week by sheer force. It was a fact that he must continue to keep bottled up within him, he knew. And he was entirely too penniless to make serious love to any girl.

He realized, looking at her there in this moment, that the best thing for Gayle Dixon to do was to build up the promised romance between her and Jeremy Tucker. Almost any year now Jeremy would be exceedingly wealthy. He had abundant money already, in fact. He was an honest sort, however shy. He was responding to Gayle's and Bill's subtle "drawing out" treatment, so that in a short time he would be socially at ease. On the whole, Bill could see nothing wrong with him, so that it was distinctly a break for Gayle to have such a young man attracted to her. And that Jeremy was definitely attracted to Gayle, Bill had already observed.

Bill dropped his hands from her arms all at once, and turned to go.

"There's nothing for you personally to be concerned about, Gayle," he said now, quietly. "If you stole that diamond bracelet, then I stole the city hall. But it's sort of our responsibility, I figure, and so I'm trying to get at the bottom of things. Police have a way of slipping up on these matters, history proves."

"Thank you, Bill. Do whatever you think is right. I trust you. Are you—going out on this matter now?"

"Yes. If it's okay."

"It is. I can keep rehearsals going for you. I want us to have a full dress rehearsal tonight. It's Saturday, and it's our last chance."

"Tonight? Say, Gayle, do that! It'll give me a chance to—look, keep the girls all here, for dinner and afterward. Set rehearsal for 9 p. m. I can get back by then."

Bill hastened away then. For his necessary trips to town and elsewhere he had taken to using one of the three Merrifield cars, a three-year-old, but still powerful, sedan, driving it himself. Bill often wondered why Mr. Merrifield kept three cars, but not even the chauffeur had been able to say.

He drove about six miles, parked and went into a small shop that made and sold keys. He purchased six assorted kinds of skeleton keys. He had already inspected the lock for which he wanted them, but he wasn't sure of the type needed, being quite inexperienced at these things.

Then he drove another two miles or so to the poorer section of town, parked again and went to a restaurant for a 40-cent dinner. He had to stall for about an hour until darkness had settled down, and when he came out he saw that street lights were on. He wanted to move while most people were at dinner in their homes, and walking up the street he saw that he had timed himself correctly.

Presently he turned quietly and entered an apartment house hall. The main door was not locked—this was hardly more than a tenement, with no doorman or other such luxury. Right and left of the hall were closed doors through which came the sound of people, of radios, the sundry noises of living. He went on, quietly, up two flights of stairs. He saw nobody.

On the third floor he paused before a room door to glance around. He was still quite alone. No light shone through the keyhole or cracks at this door.

Quietly he inserted one key, then another. The fourth opened the lock. He turned the knob and slipped into the darkness inside, clossing the door behind him. Then he took a flashlight from his pocket and set to work.

His heart was thumping some. He wasn't used to this sort of thing.

Urges That Congress Authorize Military Aid to Allies

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commander of the 27th U. S. division in Belgium and France during the World war, is urging that Congress authorize immediate military aid to the Allies "with or without war declaration."

O'Ryan suggested sending aircraft carriers, transports, protecting naval vessels and at least 2,000 bomber and fighter planes with pilots.

He expressed his views in a telegram to the Veterans Civil Service League, after receiving a message from 600 members whom he led in 1918 offering to fight under him again.

British Air Ministry Reports 1,437 Casualties

The list brought the number of dead and missing in action and on active service to date to 1,437.

Relief Expenditures For Allegany Show Increase in April

BALTIMORE, May 23 (AP)—Cost of direct relief in Maryland dropped sharply last month, heading a general downward trend in expenditures for all forms of public assistance in the state.

J. Milton Patterson, department of public welfare director issued a monthly statistical statement today showing $199,837 spent for direct relief in April compared with $231,483 expended in March—a reduction of more than thirteen percent.

Total cases on the direct relief roles likewise dropped from 10,091 in March to 9,496 last month, and an even greater decline was noted in applications filed.

Obligations incurred for all types of public assistance in the state in April amounted to $774,933, a decrease of $36,984 from March figures.

Only four counties ran contrary to the downward trend. Allegany, Calvert, Dorchester and Montgomery all reported increases in the number of cases assisted and in total expenditures.

Today Is Being Sealed Up for Year 8113

By ROMNEY WHEELER
AP Feature Service

ATLANTA — While Europe's armies are destroying evidences of civilization, southern educators are trying the preserve them—for 6,200 years.

Oglethorpe university's Crypt of Civilization, of stone and steel scheduled to be sealed here May 25, contains records of the world's knowledge since earliest recorded history—and of life as 1940's man in the street is living it.

President Thornwell Jacobs, of Oglethorpe, explains that the task of arranging the material for preservation has consumed four years. The crypt is a vault, 20x10x10 feet, on the bedrock of the Appalachians.

Words and Writings

The year 8113 A. D. was determined upon for reopening the vault by extending ahead the length of time elapsed between 4241 B. C. and 1936, which the idea of the crypt took shape.

Students are winding up the job of preserving more than 2,000 books on 35-mm. cellulose acetate film. These with motion pictures of every major event since the enauguration of President McKinley, will be stored in gas-filled glass tubes, protected by asbestos sheathing and sealed in stainless steel canisters.

A picture-story of 1940's system of collecting and distributing news by telegraph, cable, telephone and radio, as developed by a great press association, will be included in the motion picture collection, a gift of The Associated Press.

Lingerie And Razors

To Dr. T. K. Peters, erstwhile globe-trotter and former Ohio manufacturer, has fallen the task of collecting the thousands of articles that will form the picture of 1940. The archivist claims invention of the first camera for recording books on film, and his used his method of preserving laws, religions, sciences and literature known today.

But there's a homey touch, too. A tour of the receiving vault discloses a cross-section of the modern "five-and-ten," samples of lingerie, a woman's handbag, complete with cosmetics and the inevitable odds-and-ends; a jar of shaving implements, including an electric razor, jar of costume jewelry; dolls with examples of 1940 hair-dressing; an envelope of dress patterns, a handful of buttons. In a corner is a dictating machine, a typewriter, a sewing machine, a cash register. There's a scale-model railroad train, a small radio, a cake of soap in the shape of Ferdinand the Bull.

Languages of today will be created more than 6,000 years hence if sound transcriptions remain intact. All of President Roosevelt's speeches and fireside chats are to go into the vault, with recordings of King Edward VIII's abdication address, the voice of William Jennings Bryan delivering his "Cross of Gold and Crown of Thorns" speech, the voices of Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini and other rulers.

A brewery provided a sample of its product, sealed in glass, asbestos and stainless steel. A wine manufacturer did likewise. Dr. Peters isn't sure they'll be good 6,000 years hence, but observers; "I'll bet somebody will sample them."

What kind of people will open the crypt? Says Dr. Peters: "I think they'll have fewer toes, for one thing. That'll be a result of easy transportation. Their bodies probably will be small than ours, but likely their heads will be considerably larger. I think transfer of thoughts without spoken word will be common then. Today we call things like that supernatural. Really it's merely supernormal."

The crypt is constructed beneath the cathedral-like limestone building that houses Oglethorpe's library and administrative offices. It is roofed with 7 feet of solid granite, and walled with 2½ feet of the same material. When closed, the 10x4 foot door will be walled up and covered with a heavy stainless steel door, welded to similar steel embedded in the rock.

The walls of the vault are lined with vitreous porcelain enamel, with metal shelves to hold sealed receptacles of glass and stainless steel.

If You Watch Your Feet You Step Up Vitality

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

If you have a dragged out, spring fever feeling, give your feet a good going over and see if it doesn't put new life into you.

Give your feet special attention for a week or more. Try a footbath of Epsom salts, using three tablespoons of salts to a quart of water—and be sure the water isn't too hot. With a soft nail brush, scrub your feet vigorously in upward circular movements.

Dry them, and rub in cream, almond or olive oil, and massage them from toe to heel in the same upward and outward movements that you used with your brush. Remove the cream and pat in rubbing alcohol or witch-hazel, then sprinkle them with talcum powder.

You hear much about exercising the feet, but you probably neglect these exercises more than any others. Yet they perhaps are the most important to your whole well-being, for, in strengthening the foot muscles you do away with painful troubles that affect the whole body.

When you are getting ready for bed — or when you climb out in the morning — sit on the edge of the bed and practice curling the toes under as far as possible then straightening them out. Try picking a pencil off the floor with your toes; or stand on a rolling pin curling your toes around it. Work your toes vigorously, so you feel a definite pull on the muscles.

Another good exercise is to stand with your feet about 5 inches apart and roll them outward so that the outside of the foot supports the body. Each time the foot is rolled, make the sole clear the floor.

Watch your walking, for just your manner of walking may be leading to fallen metatarsal arches, or trying backaches. As you walk, come down on the heel, tilt the weight to the outer borders of the feet and come up on the toes with a spring. Point your toes straight ahead or even slightly in. Always set one foot directly in front of the other as if you were walking a chalk line.

Curling your toes 'round a rolling pin is good exercise. Lillian Russel, stage and radio actress, agrees.

Today Is Being Sealed Up for Year 8113

By ROMNEY WHEELER

Dr. Peters with some of the material destined for the Crypt of Civilization. He holds a sample of men's underwear and is surrounded by a cash register, cans of movie film, a soapy Ferdinand the Bull, radio sets and other material.

ATLANTA — While Europe's armies are destroying evidences of civilization, southern educators are trying the preserve them—for 6,200 years.

Oglethorpe university's Crypt of Civilization, of stone and steel scheduled to be sealed here May 25, contains records of the world's knowledge since earliest recorded history—and of life as 1940's man in the street is living it.

President Thornwell Jacobs, of Oglethorpe, explains that the task of arranging the material for preservation has consumed four years. The crypt is a vault, 20x10x10 feet, on the bedrock of the Appalachians.

Words and Writings

The year 8113 A. D. was determined upon for reopening the vault by extending ahead the length of time elapsed between 4241 B. C. and 1936, which the idea of the crypt took shape.

Embassy Offers a Story of Intrigue

Combining thrills, romance, music and comedy, Monogram's "Murder on the Yukon," continuing the screen adventures of Renfrew of the Royal Mounted, opens today at the Embassy theater.

A story of intrigue in the Great Canadian Northwest, the film shows Renfrew and his pal Kelly tracking down a murderer and trying to find the reason for his killing the miser of the Yukon.

They save a beautiful girl from being swindled, break up a counterfeiting ring, and catch the murderer before the picture ends, and singing star Jimmy Newill gets ample opportunity to sing tuneful ballads with a glorious baritone voice.

Jack Clifford handles the comedy, and the feminine factor in the romance is Polly Ann Young. Earl Douglas, William Royle, and Kenneth Douglas are a nasty trio of villains, headed by Chief Thundercloud, who also played Geronimo in the picture of that name, as Manti, a renegade Indian.

The second feature is Barbara Stanwyck in "Stella Dallas" with John Boles. In addition to the two features the seventh chapter of the serial "The Shadow" is on the bill.

Garden Has Western And Jane Withers

Rough Rider Roy Rogers rides rough-shod over new prairie dangers in his musical western for Republic Studios, "Rough Riders' Round-up," now at the Garden theater.

Roy is given a story-background of gold robberies on the Mexican border. Roy and his cohort, Rusty, played by Raymond Hatton, have just returned from the war with Spain in which they served with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders. On arrival, they find new adventures awaiting them.

Mary Hart is again Roy's feminine foil. Hatton, an experienced trouper, uses his role for as many laughs as possible. Dorothy Sebastian, who plays on the other side of the law in this picture, makes her screen comeback, and is still the interesting personality of old.

Not satisfied with being a noted Hollywood director and writer, Lloyd Corrigan has turned actor and appears in a featured role in support of Jane Withers in her starring comedy, "High School," Twentieth Century-Fox film now at the Garden.

Featured with Corrigan in "High School" are Joe Brown, Jr., Claire Du Brey, Lynn Roberts, Paul Harvey, Cliff Edwards, Lillian Porter and John Kellogg.

Comedy Is Offered At the Maryland

Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas are starred in "Too Many Husbands," Columbia comedy, at the Maryland theater.

Based upon W. Somerset Maugham's stage success, the picture is brought to the screen by Wesley Ruggles from Claude Binyon's adaptation, with a supporting cast which includes Harry Davenport, Melville Coper, Dorothy Peterson, Mary Treen and Tom Dugan.

Miss Arthur, in contrast to the finesse she displayed in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Only Angels Have Wings," employs her gift for light comedy. As the lonely wife suddenly "blessed" with two devoted husbands, Miss Arthur expresses her appreciation of the flattering circumstance, as well as her perplexed and fearful recognition that its outcome might well mean a prison sentence for her. Except for its many comic implications, the latter note is not too greatly stressed.

Fugitive Caught

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., May 23 (AP)—Warden Leo Callison and prison guards were searching for Alfred Goddard of Nicholas county, serving six years for breaking and entering, today when they found instead, Walker Prichard, Cabell county, and Lewis Henthorne, Wood county, who escaped last Monday.

WED AND HOW!

Jean Arthur now appearing with Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas as her co-stars, as a young wife with "Too Many Husbands," at the Maryland Theater. The new comedy, produced and directed by Wesley Ruggles, is based upon a W. Somerset Maugham stage success and includes in its cast such other well-known actors as Harry Davenport, Dorothy Peterson, Melville Cooper and Tom Dugan.

OUTDOOR HERO

Aunts Can Help In Bringing Up Children

Many Times They Have More Opportunities to Care for Youngsters

BY GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

The day has nearly passed when unmarried aunts bring up their sister's children. Nevertheless, there are still aunts like the Aunt in Whittier's First Snow Fall—who have fired their nieces and nephews with ambition. Such an aunt of mine still lives, and I owe her much.

"And welcome wheresoe-er she went.
A calm and gracious element."

William Lyon Phelps, in his Autobiography with Leters devotes a chapter to his Aunt Libbie, who lived alone and paid frequent visits to William's boyhood home; "some of the happiest moments" of his life were spent in her house, when his brothers and he went there for week-ends, he writes.

"Her influence on me (and my brothers) was wholly beneficial for she supplied everything I did not get at home . . . She was interested in every detail of our lives, and longed to have us happy and natural, and did her best to make us so. She studied the art of conversation as she studied the art of singing, and she seemed to prize good manners and good breeding and good taste above everything."

Learned Graciousness

William Lyon Phelps cites a vivid lesson for all of us in the art of being gracious:

"Among other things I learned from her, I learned some consideration for others. When I was about eight years old, spending a week-end at her house, a middle-aged man called one evening, and after a polite skirmish with my aunt, he devoted his attention to me. At that time I happened to be excited about boats, and the visitor discussed the subject in a way that I found charming. After he left, I spoke of him with enthusiasm. What a man! And how tremendously interested in boats! My aunt informed me that he was a New York lawyer; that he cared nothing whatver about boats—too knot the slightest interest in the subject. "But why then did he talk all the time about boats?" 'Because he is a gentleman. He saw you were interested in boats, and he talked about the things he know would interest and please you. He made himself agreeable.'"

With more time for leisure and social recreation, many an unmarried aunt has more opportunities to cultivate the social graces than her married sister with several children. However, an occasional count will nag at her sister and children about manners.

An Inspiration

The widely-read and highly-cultivated aunt of fourteen-year-old William Lyon Phelps must have done much to inspire him for the career by which he in turn, has inspired so many hundreds of others in appreciation of great literature. "I was fourteen or fifteen . . . I had recently read the complete works of William Shakespeare, and from five in the morning until six-thirty we discussed the characters and plots with ardour. We did this on every one of her visits for several years. I learned a great deal," he writes.

Often I hear from a youth inspiring aunt, and I cheerfully answer her. Indeed I answer personally, as soon as I am able, every one who, desiring a personal reply, writes me in care of this paper and encloses a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What of the notion by some people that the child should have measles, whooping cough and other children's diseases early "so he won't get them so hard?

A. Wholly unfounded on facts. On the contrary, the earlier the child contracts these diseases as a rule, the more likely he is to die from them or suffer ill effects therefrom nn later years.

Q. When a parent wishes to consult a psychologist about some behavior or personality problem in his child how is he to tell who is a psychologist and who isn't?

A. One good way is to get in touch with the psychology department of your nearest college of university. Another is to write me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Being a member of the American Association of Applied Psychologists, I have a list of its members and can name for you those in your section of the nation.

Schoolchildren of France have adopted 55,000 soldiers without families to which they write and send gifts.

Many dairymen paint their barn walls with aluminum paint to repel flies. It has been shown, however, that this has little or no value for the purpose.

Stocks Fluctuate Widely in Day Marked by Rises and Declines

Early Rally Gives Way to Selling Move; Close Is Strong

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Traders suffered another mild attack of "war nerves" in today's stock market and leaders slumped 1 to 4 points before attracting last-minute support.

The list started off with gains running to three or more for steels, aircraft, motors and specialties. The news from Europe turned a bit sour, however, and trends soon began to waver. At the forepart of the final hour a selling blast knocked quotations to the lowest of the day. Then buyers stepped in and extreme losses were substantially cut or transformed into modest advances in many cases.

Transfers totaled 1,642,450 shares against 2,132,630 yesterday.

Allied Chemical was a weak spot, dropping 4½ at 141. Off at the finish, but fractions to three above their lows, were Bethlehem steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Lockheed, Dow Chemical, Kennecott, Loft, Santa Fe, Great Northern, J. I. Case and Texas Corp.

Ending with gains running to a point or so were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Pennsylvania, International Telephone and American Smelting. The widest advance was shown by du Pont which jumped 4¼ to 154.

Aluminum Ltd., sloughed off 13 points in the curb. Lesser losers included E. W. Bliss, N. J. Zinc, Standard Steel Spring, Creole Petroleum and Niles-Bement-Pond. Slightly ahead were Electric Bond & Share, Nehi Corp., and St. Regis Paper. Volume here was about 280,000 shares compared with 366,000 the day before.

Stocks Fluctuate Widely in Day Marked by Rises and Declines

Early Rally Gives Way to Selling Move; Close Is Strong

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—Traders suffered another mild attack of "war nerves" in today's stock market and leaders slumped 1 to 4 points before attracting last-minute support.

The list started off with gains running to three or more for steels, aircraft, motors and specialties. The news from Europe turned a bit sour, however, and trends soon began to waver. At the forepart of the final hour a selling blast knocked quotations to the lowest of the day. Then buyers stepped in and extreme losses were substantially cut or transformed into modest advances in many cases.

Transfers totaled 1,642,450 shares against 2,132,630 yesterday.

Allied Chemical was a weak spot, dropping 4½ at 141. Off at the finish, but fractions to three above their lows, were Bethlehem steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Lockheed, Dow Chemical, Kennecott, Loft, Santa Fe, Great Northern, J. I. Case and Texas Corp.

Ending with gains running to a point or so were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Pennsylvania, International Telephone and American Smelting. The widest advance was shown by du Pont which jumped 4¼ to 154.

Aluminum Ltd., sloughed off 13 points in the curb. Lesser losers included E. W. Bliss, N. J. Zinc, Standard Steel Spring, Creole Petroleum and Niles-Bement-Pond. Slightly ahead were Electric Bond & Share, Nehi Corp. and St. Regis Paper. Volume here was about 280,000 shares compared with 366,000 the day before.

St. Louis Browns Snare 12 Inning Contest by 8-7

Beat Washington with Three Run Rally in Twelfth

ST. LOUIS, May 23 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns climaxed a long uphill battle with three runs in their half of the twelfth inning today to edge out the Washington Senators, 8 to 7, and gain an even break in their two-game series.

George McQuinn started the Browns on their winning rally with his second home run of the game after the first man had been retired in the twelfth frame. Rip Radcliffe singled and scored the tying run on a three-bagger by Chet Laabs who followed him in with the winning tally on Don Heffner's long fly to George Case.

Conn-Lesnevich Bout In Detroit on June 5

DETROIT, May 23 (AP) — State Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche today approved contracts calling for a 15-round light heavyweight title fight here June 5 between champion Billy Conn and challenger Gus Lesnevich.

Hettche recently had said he would insist on a 20-round scrap, explaining that the champion was a slow starter, but at today's conference he capitulated to the claims of managers that a longer indoor bout would handicap both fighters. The bout will be at Olympia arena.

Conn and Lesnevich underwent physical examinations and doctors said they should not have any trouble making the 175-pound weight limit. Conn appeared to have recovered from an attack of boils which twice caused postponements of the bout.

Race Notes

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—For the excellent job he did in piloting Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion to victory over Bimelech in the Kentucky Derby—probably as fine a ride as the Derby has even seen—Jockey Carrol Bierman has been signed as the contract rider for Mrs. Mars' Milky Way Stable.

Trainer Roy Waldron announced today he had taken over the contract of the Centralia (Wash.) rider, who now lives in Louisville and can make 109 pounds without trouble. Bierman formerly was under contract to L. B. Mayer, the movie man.

Bimelech

Trainer Bill Hurley is starting to stretch Bimelech out to fit the mile-and-a-half test of the Belmont on June 8. The colt was sent a mile and a quarter over the Belmont training track yesterday in 2.15 3-5.

Chicago

Chicago's Arlington and Washington Parks have carded a "marathon series" of route races for this summer's racing—real tests for horses over a distance of ground.

The series begins with a mile-and-a-quarter gallop on June 26 at Arlington for a $1,500 purse and winds up with a grueling four-mile affair August 28 at Washington for $3,500. On between the eight other distance events.

Delaware

Delaware Park plans to build its "Oaks" for fillies into one of the richest prizes on its schedule. The event, at a mile and a furlong, now carries $4,000 added money. The park's executive committee is planning to increase the winning share through futurity and subscription conditions.

Blensign

Ever since Blensign came winging home Tuesday, one of the most impressive two-year-old winners of the Belmont meeting, H. G. Bedwell has been receiving some handsome offers for the colt. He's not taking any, however, and probably is looking ahead to 1941. Unfortunately, the son of Blenheim and Design has only one stake engagement at Belmont and he probably won't run in that one, because it's under claiming conditions.

Elks and Jr. A. of C. Play 14-14 Deadlock

The Elks and the Junior Association of Commerce teams of the Rocking Chair softball league really rocked the ramparts when they tangled yesterday, and, after each team had hung up 14 hits through the seven sessions, the net result was a 14-14 deadlock.

Somerville Nicholson came out of retirement and put on a one-man socking show with two homers, a triple and a double. He had competition for the hitting honors with

St. Louis Browns Snare 12 Inning Contest by 8-7

Beat Washington with Three Run Rally in Twelfth

ST. LOUIS, May 23 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns climaxed a long uphill battle with three runs in their half of the twelfth inning today to edge out the Washington Senators, 8 to 7, and gain an even break in their two-game series.

George McQuinn started the Browns on their winning rally with a second home run of the game after the first man had been retired in the twelfth frame. Rip Radcliffe singled and scored the tying run on a three-bagger by Chet Laabs who followed him in with the winning tally on Don Heffner's long fly to George Case.

Conn-Lesnevich Bout In Detroit on June 5

DETROIT, May 23 (AP) — State Boxing Commissioner John J. Fetiche today approved contracts calling for a 15-round light heavyweight title fight here June 5 between champion Billy Conn and challenger Gus Lesnevich.

Fetiche recently had said he would insist on a 20-round scrap, explaining that the champion was a slow starter, but at today's conference he capitulated to the claims of managers that a longer indoor bout would handicap both fighters. The bout will be at Olympia arena.

Conn and Lesnevich underwent physical examinations and doctors said they should not have any trouble making the 175-pound weight limit. Conn appeared to have recovered from an attack of boils which twice caused postponements of the bout.

Race Notes

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—For the excellent job he did in piloting Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion to victory over Bimelech in the Kentucky Derby—probably as fine a ride as the Derby has even seen—Jockey Carrol Bierman has been signed as the contract rider for Mrs. Mars' Milky Way Stable.

Trainer Roy Waldron announced today he had taken over the contract of the Centralia (Wash.) rider, who now lives in Louisville and can make 109 pounds without trouble. Bierman formerly was under contract to L. B. Mayer, the movie man.

Bimelech

Trainer Bill Hurley is starting to stretch Bimelech out to fit the mile-and-a-half test of the Belmont on June 8. The colt was sent a mile and a quarter over the Belmont training track yesterday in 2.15 3-5.

Chicago

Chicago's Arlington and Washington Parks have carded a "marathon series" of route races for this summer's racing—real tests for horses over a distance of ground.

The series begins with a mile-and-a-quarter gallop on June 26 at Arlington for a $1,500 purse and winds up with a grueling four-mile affair August 28 at Washington for $3,500. On between the eight other distance events.

Delaware

Delaware Park plans to build its "Oaks" for fillies into one of the richest prizes on its schedule. The event, at a mile and a furlong, now carries $4,000 added money. The park's executive committee is planning to increase the winning share through futurity and subscription conditions.

Blensign

Ever since Blensign came winging home Tuesday, one of the most impressive two-year-old winners of the Belmont meeting, H. G. Bedwell has been receiving some handsome offers for the colt. He's not taking any, however, and probably is looking ahead to 1941. Unfortunately, the son of Blenheim and Design has only one stake engagement at Belmont and he probably won't run in that one, because it's under claiming conditions.

Elks and Jr. A. of C. Play 14-14 Deadlock

The Elks and the Junior Association of Commerce teams of the Rocking Chair softball league really rocked the ramparts when they tangled yesterday, and, after each team had hung up 14 hits through the seven sessions, the net result was a 14-14 deadlock.

Somerville Nicholson came out of retirement and put on a one-man socking show with two homers, a triple and a double. He had competition for the hitting honors with

WAR IS DECLARED ON USED CAR PRICES

We are making a revolutionary step in the merchandising of Used Cars at these unprecendented prices and we want it made clear that such low prices as these will remain on all of our used cars in the future

BECAUSE:

1. We have the largest used car volume in Cumberland.
2. Our sales of Chevrolets are double that of any other dealer in Allegany County.
2. We have the largest service volume.
4. We have the largest parts and accessories volume.

Therefore, it is not necessary that we make a profit on used car sales. We would rather lose a little on the used car and have you as our customer.

WINS CHAMPIONSHIP CROWN FROM GARCIA

KEN OVERLIN

NEW YORK, May 23. (AP)—Ken Overlin, the ex-sailor boy from Washington, won the New York-California version of the world's middleweight championship from Ceferino Garcia tonight with as "cute" a job of boxing and ring generalship as Madison Square Garden has seen in a long time. Overlin weighed 159; Garcia, 154½.

Before a slim, almost cozy, little gathering of fans, the much-travelled veteran took a 15-round decision from the slugging Filipino.

What he really did, however, was to outfox, outbox, out-move, outfeint — in fact, almost out-everything-Garcia throughout the tussle. The Filipino was a baffled battler when it was all over.

Only on rare occasions was Garcia able to set himself to throw his deadly right hand, the occasion was even rarer when he was able to land cleanly with this so-called "bolo punch." Usually Overlin took it on the shoulder, the arm, or didn't take it at all, dancing in close out of harm's way.

Wilbur Shaw Has Lots To Live for But Tempts Fate

Auto Speed Driver Tells of Lure of Sport and Dangers

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service

INDIANAPOLIS—He is about the size of Lou Ambers after the lightweight has bolted a big bowl of spaghettie. A little guy with blondish hair, a trim, short moustache and a friendly smile.

His hands are small and, at first glance, don't give the impression that they have had hard usage. A desk man's hands. There are crow's feet around his eyes, saying that he has spent hours staring into the glare of the sun.

You could guess a long time before you hit upon his occupation.

He is Wilbur Shaw.

On May 30 he'll be behind the wheel of a giant mechanical contraption that will roar and bounce over brick and asphalt for 500 miles around the two and one-half mile Indianapolis track in the Memorial Day speedway race.

Do 150 M.P.H.

You've driven your auto 70 or 80 miles an hour and you know how, at that speed, you have to fight some to keep the machine under control, how it seems to want to dart off the road and head for the rough.

So, you probably thought, as I did, that it would take a big, strong man with huge, powerful hands and shoulders to guide one of those growling sputtering thunderbolts that challenge for the speed championship.

For those big chariots scream over the bricks at 150 miles an hour. They're built for speed and not comfort. Comfortable appliances mean more weight — and more weight means less speed. So, little comfort. A racing driver has to fight that monster for nearly five consecutive hours, has to pull and tug to refuse its desire to stray off a straight line.

Yes, it takes a strong man—but not necessarily a big one.

"Big men mean just that much more weight to carry," Shaw explained. "Most of the drivers are medium-sized men."

Shaw is here training for the grind. He's down to around 140. "But I'll lose 10 or 12 pounds in the race," he said.

The unrelenting jerking of that wheel in a long race has left Shaw's hands a torn, cut bloody mass. "They looked like hamburger." And the heat from the engine has burned the soles off his shoes and scorched his legs up to the knees. The roar of the engines is like the noise of a dozen riveting machines.

"Your head is throbbing, your throat is parched, pain runs through your legs and your arms ache, your hands feel like a group of blisters. But you have to keep driving.

A Tough Job

"You must drive your brain to keep it clear, strain your eyes to take in and consider everything in front of you," he said.

Shaw has won at Indianapolis twice. In 1937 he set a speed record of 113 miles an hour in a streamlined job he built himself and last year he drove a foreign-built car 115 mph. He's won more money than any other driver at Indianapolis.

Now that he has enjoyed the fame of victory and is a comparatively wealthy man, why does he continue in this daredevil sport, one that often claims lives such as it did last year when Floyd Roberts, the 1938 winner, was killed when his car overturned during the race?

"Love of competition," Shaw said with a smile. "It gets in your blood."

"Don't you ever think of the dangers?"

"Yes, and no," he said. "I never think of the possibility of fatal injury itself but I am always thinking and studying possible situations that might lead to such injuries and storing away in my mind avenues of escape.

You Just Do It

"When a situation confronts you at fast speed, you don't have time to think. You must act instinctively."

Shaw's desire this year is another victory that will enable him to equal Lou Meyer's record of three triumphs. He will drive the same machine with which he won last year.

Timing, he said, is the secret of his success as a race driver.

"Race driving demands more coordination and timing than any other sport," Shaw explained. "I've found that it requires better timing than golf, skeet shooting, airplane piloting, hunting or motorcycle riding."

Wilbur is good in many sports. He shoots in the low 70's in golf, has a marksman's rating with a pistol, flies his own airplane, rides horseback. Last fall he bagged 21 rabbits with 22 shots, and that's some shooting.

He thinks he'll win again this year at Indianapolis. So keep an eye on that stout-hearted little guy, Wilbur Shaw.

Dorothy Gardner Wins Tournament

CANTON, May 23. (AP)—Dorothy Gardner, attractive Steubenville golfer, won the Ohio Women's Medal Play tournament in convincing fashion today.

She posted an 84 for a 36-hole total of 162—ten strokes below her nearest rival in the two-day competition. Molly Lou Connelly of Cleveland added an 89 today to her first-round score of 83 to finish ten strokes behind Miss Gardner, and Mrs. G. E. Durham of Canton, with 92-82—174, was third.

In addition to having the best gross, Miss Gardner's 12-stroke handicap gave her the low net of 150. Since she won the low gross, the low net went to Mrs. Durham at 152. Miss Connelly was third at 158, her handicap being only 14 strokes for the 36 holes, to Mrs. Durham's 22.

Pittsburgher High in Cumberland Club Shoot

A. B. McMullen, of Pittsburgh, showed local gunners "how" in the weekly shoot of the Cumberland Gun Club on the club traps yesterday afternoon, breaking 49 of a possible 50 targets.

He was given a run for honors by John Leighter, who broke 47. Behind Leighter came Jim Stevenson with 44, while Huck McFerran and Jim Powell each had 43. Dr. Diehl of Frostburg broke 41 and G. Frank Smith had 38.

In the skeet shoot, McMullen again was high with 42, beating out Lorraine Eisenberg who had 36. Dr. Diehl was third with 34 and Stevenson had 33 to complete the field.

Kay Pearson Beats Betty Jameson

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 23 (AP)—Pudgy, good-natured Kay Pearson sent National Champion Betty Jameson reeling from the Women's Southern Golf Association tournament today with a clean-cut, 2 and 1 triumph.

The 26-year old former National Intercollegiate tennis champion, playing her second year of major tournament golf, blew into the semi-finals with a stunning show of fine golf shots that had Miss Jameson down from the first hole.

Tomorrow she plays Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite of Fort Worth. Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C., meets Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., defending her title for the third straight year.

Mrs. Goldthwaite turned in a one-up triumph over Dorothy Kirby, tall Atlanta girl, who was runner-up for the 1939 national title.

Nervous, bespectacled Jane Cothran of Greenville, S. C., had Miss Miley down all the way — and then blew the match on the last green when her two-foot putt rimmed the hole.

Mrs. Page, medalist, ran out a long string of pars to beat Mrs. Sam Israel of New Orleans, 6 to 4.

She's a Knockout in Evening Gown And a Terror with Target Rifle

By FRANKLIN BANKER

PITTSBURGH—Rosemary Novak is the new women's intercollegiate rifle champion, but she'd a darned sight rather be "a good architect."

Architecture is what she's been studying these five last years at Carnegie Tech, bent over her well-worn drafting table 12 hours a day much of the time.

She reported for rifle practice in her freshman year "because it sounded like fun." "Chiseling" on her lunch time, she has been banging away at targets ever since—and in the recent intercollegiate tournament, she scored 70 consecutive bull's eyes to win the title and set a new record. The old mark was 50.

"It just takes good control and coordination," she says. "They come from practice."

A steady nerve is also essential for an architect. She doesn't smoke or drink, and that probably helps.

After graduating in June, Rosemary, 21 years old, will set out to find whether it is difficult for a woman to get a job as an architect. She and another girl are the first of the fair sex to be graduated from Tech's architectural school in four years.

"I have only one worry," she said with a pretty smile. "Will men want a woman working around them? Oh, they shouldn't have any objection."

She's quite pleasingly feminine. Fluffy light brown hair, not too tall, make-up used just right, flashing teeth, personable. A knockout in an evening gown. She won't marry until she's 28 or so. "I want to work a while first."

Rosemary is also good at archery. She won the unofficial women's collegiate championship in Pittsburgh in 1938. About her suburban Mt. Lebanon home she plays the piano, tennis and swims, "just for fun."

There were no architects among her progenitors. "I just liked drawing, math, and building things so I became an architect," she explained. And there you are.

At least 500 young people will be entered in the track and field events while hundreds more will participate in the games events. Foster Speicher, chairman of the committee in charge, announced today that at least 2,000 would take part.

The meet will get under way at 9:30 o'clock with a number of games events. The track and field events will be held in the afternoon beginning at 1:30.

The meet is held by authority of the county board of education and the general committee includes principals of high schools and several of the grade schools.

First place winners in individual track and field events and winners of some of the games events are eligible to compete in the Western Shore Championships which will be held in the near future.

She's a Knockout in Evening Gown And a Terror with Target Rifle

By FRANKLIN BANKER

PITTSBURGH—Rosemary Novak is the new women's intercollegiate rifle champion, but she'd a darned sight rather be "a good architect."

Architecture is what she's been studying these five last years at Carnegie Tech, bent over her well-worn drafting table 12 hours a day much of the time.

She reported for rifle practice in her freshman year "because it sounded like fun." "Chiseling" on her lunch time, she has been banging away at targets ever since—and in the recent intercollegiate tournament, she scored 70 consecutive bull's eyes to win the title and set a new record. The old mark was 50.

"It just takes good control and coordination," she says. "They come from practice."

A steady nerve is also essential for an architect. She doesn't smoke or drink, and that probably helps.

After graduating in June, Rosemary, 21 years old, will set out to find whether it is difficult for a woman to get a job as an architect. She and another girl are the first of the fair sex to be graduated from Tech's architectural school in four years.

"I have only one worry," she said with a pretty smile. "Will men want a woman working around them? Oh, they shouldn't have any objection."

She's quite pleasingly feminine. Fluffy light brown hair, not too tall, make-up used just right, flashing teeth, personable. A knockout in an evening gown. She won't marry until she's 28 or so. "I want to work a while first."

Rosemary is also good at archery. She won the unofficial women's collegiate championship in Pittsburgh in 1938. About her suburban Mt. Lebanon home she plays the piano, tennis and swims, "just for fun."

There were no architects among her progenitors. "I just liked drawing, math, and building things, so I became an architect," she explained. And there you are.

Yanks' Comeback Campaign Hits Snag in Detroit

DiMaggio and Greenberg Hit Homers in First Inning

Winning Run Scored in Ninth with Three Men on Bases

DETROIT, May 23 (AP)—The comeback campaign of the world champion New York Yankees struck another snag today when the Detroit Tigers pushed across a run in the ninth inning to win a pitching duel between Buck Newsom and Red Ruffing, 3 to 2.

The struggle got away to a blustery, home-run beginning, with Joe DiMaggio and Hank Greenberg each hitting a four-bagger with a man on base. But then the two veteran righthanders tightened the screws for a scoreless stretch until the last of the ninth.

After Greenberg raised a fly to open the final frame, Rudy York singled, Bruce Campbell doubled and Pinky Higgins was purposely passed to fill the bases. Then Catcher Billy Sullivan slammed a fly into center to score York with the winning run.

52 Runs, 80 Hits Made In Four A. A. Tilts; Only Game Close

By The Associated Press

The fans who prefer free-hitting baseball—with plenty of traffic between the bull pens and the pitching rubbers — are getting their money's worth in the American Association.

In four games Wednesday night association clubs scored 52 runs and piled up an even 80 hits.

The league leading Kansas City Blues, downed Milwaukee, 10 - 5; Minneapolis defeated St. Paul, 12 to 5, and Louisville scored 10 runs on 12 hits to trim Indianapolis 10 to 5.

The only game of tight baseball was the Toledo-Columbus clash, which ended with the latter on the long end of a 3 to 2 count.

Grid Aces Licked, Then Arrested

OMAHA, Nebr., May 23 (AP)—Two Creighton University athletes, both star football players, were taken into custody by police yesterday after a street fight in which they were subdued by a lighter and smaller opponent.

They were Capt.-elect John Knolla, halfback and winner of the Puray Trophy as the out-standing 1939 player, and John Powers, also a halfback, known to his teammates as "John the Brain" because of his high schoolastic standing.

They were booked by police for intoxication and resisting and for drunken driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Clyde O'Brien, 160 pounds of formidable opposition, put Powers temporarily out of the fight and subdued Knolla.

Last World War Produced Gaudy Sports Characters

By JOHN LARDNER

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, May 23 — Some gaudy characters in sports, violent and otherwise, were produced by the last World War. Mostly they were violent.

You could say that Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth, though neither of them saw military action, were products of the war, for their special types of violence — Dempsey's blood-letting in the hot sun at Toledo in 1919 and Ruth's bombardment of the garden walls with his big bat and the rabbit ball, beginning in 1921 — were what the post-war customers wanted in the way of smashing sound and electric action.

Georges Carpentier was a war man. He did a little fighting before the war, but he created a new and special kind of hysteria after the Armistice with his blond aggressiveness, his humming right hand, his lightning knockouts of Joe Beckett and Bat Levinsky. And Carpentier himself was crushed eventually by one of the most violent characters that war ever spawned.

Battling Siki A War Hero

Today there are said to be several thousand Senegalese troops (French) on the border of Italy, hungering for the blood of the men who wiped out Ethiopia. The Senegalese had no hatred for Italy in 1914-1918, but they fought for France just the same, and one of their number was a brave and brutal savage, born in the jungle, who was known in the ranks as Louis Phal.

He was twice decorated. He won the Croix De Guerre for conspicuous bravery in action. He paid no heed to shells or rifle fire, and the helmet on his wooly head was constantly in the forefront of the thickest scrimmage.

When a small boy, Phal had been adopted as a mascot in Senegal by a French actress, who brought him back to Paris and dressed him in a page's livery of bottle blue. About a year before the war broke out, he began to make his living as a prize-fighter, under the name of Battling Siki. He fought only half a dozen times, with indifferent success, before he joined the army and won regimental notoriety and reward with the blood-curdling frenzy of his bayonet charge.

Siki came out of the war hungry for more action. The French public felt the same way. Carpentier was the public's idol and the world's outstanding pugilistic hero, but Siki, though popular in Paris, did not enter Carpentier's sphere until the hero was smashed by Dempsey in 1921.

Then Carpentier needed a fight to reconstruct his prestige in rance, and Siki was picked for the victim. Carpentier's manager, Francois Descamps, took no chances. The fight was fixed. Siki agreed to fall down in the first round as a token of his good faith and then to go down permanently in the third round.

What A Surprise

The match proceeded as arranged, and Siki went down in the third round — but he did not stay down. The black savage from Senegal leaped to his feet as the count was toiling and hit Carpentier on the point of the chin. Dazed, Carpentier took a murderous mauling in the next two rounds and was knocked cold in the sixth. Battling Siki became the light heavyweight champion of the world.

Post-war Paris was his oyster, and the Senegalese smashed it open with a violent blow of his wallet. He bought a rainbow wardrobe. He tried to drink all the wine in Montmartre, and nearly succeeded. He walked the streets with a young lion on a leash, and sometimes carried a monkey on his shoulder.

Siki had a good heart, but his temper was quick and his manners were savage and simple. One day his feet hurt, so he went to the office of a chiropodist. The doctor refused to treat him. Siki picked up all the office furniture and hurled it out the window into the street.

After he lost the title through the dismal folly of fighting Michael Francis McTigue in Dublin on St. Patrick's day, the Senegalese came to America. He fought some, but chiefly he wandered about Hell's Kitchen in New York City by night, drinking wine or whisky, wrecking saloons, and punching cops and cab drivers. Once he was stabbed and recovered from the wound. Then, at last, the inevitable happened — the man who walked into German machine gun fire with his teeth gleaming was found shot to death, in the back, in a side-street gutter near his home. He had dragged his bleeding body 100 yards along the gutter before he died. Harlem gave him a Mohammedan funeral.

The war lasted all his life with Siki. As much as any man I know of, he was born for violence and violently lived and died.

Paw Paw Hi Defeats Fort Hill by 12 to 0

Robey was in his usual good form and blanked the Sentinels while limiting them to four hits. He played a big part in the Paw Paw attack getting two hits, one a homer, and accounting for five of his team's runs.

Frey opened for Fort Hill but was forced off the mound in the second after yielding three runs in the first. He was unable to check the onslaught with two gone in the second, when Paw Paw added four more counters.

Crawford replaced him and was nicked for eight hits in the two and two-thirds innings he hurled. Miller finished and checked the home team failing to yield a hit while retiring five batters.

Cubs Win 13-Inning Game from Phils

PHILADELPHIA, May 23 (AP)—Doubles by Bill Nicholson and Al Todd and a single by Bob Mattick gave the Chicago Cubs two runs and a 4 to 3 victory over the fighting Phillies in a 13-inning game at Shibe Park tonight.

A crowd of 7,801 that braved a drizzle and chilly weather saw the Phils almost pull the game out of the fire in their last time at bat, scoring one run and having the bases full when pinch hitter Herman Schulte grounded to Mattick for the final out.

Hugh Mulcahy, of the Phils, seeking his fifth straight win, and veteran Charlie Root, of the Cubs, had a pitching duel for ten innings. Root went out for a pinch-hitter in the eleventh but Mulcahy went the route.

Downfall of Michigan In Track Predicted By Ace Dopester

By The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich, May 23.—Overthrow of Michigan as Western Conference track champion was forecast today by Phil Diamond, whose dope sheets in the last decade have picked 18 winners in 19 meets.

Indiana will win the championship at Evanston, Ill., Friday and Saturday, the dark-haired Michigan German professor declared, with the Wolverines trailing by 5 points. Indiana's winning total he set at 49 points.

After wearing out dozens of pencils and erasers, Diamond emerged with the following predictions:

Indiana will win six first places, with Roy Cochrane taking the 220-yard dash and low hurdles and Archie Harris the shotput and discus.

Michigan will win three events, Breidenbach nosing out Cochrane in a great 440 race.

Ohio State will score 29 points to beat out Wisconsin for third place.

Michigan may have an ace up its sleeve in the prospect that Breidenbach may run the 220, Diamond said.

Scores of the other teams, he predicted, will be: Wisconsin, 27; Illinois, 21; Minnesota, 17; Purdue and Northwestern, 15 each; Chicago, 8, and Iowa, 1.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—We are warned by Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, to keep our eyes on the "touch putters" in the National Open early next month.

Corcoran lists Sam Snead, Jimmy Demaret, Byron Nelson, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Horton Smith and Ralph Guldahl as leading exponents of this method of dunking the ball, and, considering the class of these players, it would seem like advising you to keep your eyes on Joe Louis in a fight.

Elaborating, Corcoran says the Canterbury greens are fast, and that on a fast green the players who putt with that intangible something called "touch" or "feel" have a distinct advantage over the pendulum putters, or sweepers.

"The National Open is won on the greens," he explains. "Check the winners of the last 25 years—Jones, Hagen, Sarazen, Goodman, Dutra, Manero, Parks and the rest—you'll find every one was a fine putter.

"In fact, Sam Parks proves the point that if you take the putting touch from the rest of the field and leave it to one man he'll win. Parks won at Oakmont in 1935 because he knew every blade of grass on the course.

"The putting touch is a tricky thing. You either have it or you haven't, and you don't know when it's going to leave or return. After Ed Oliver had shot a 64 in one of the Winter tournaments he told me he was afraid to go to bed because he might wake up with the touch gone.

x x x x

"And Demaret says there is little difference between a 68 and a 75—just a few putts that either dropped or didn't.

"Oddly enough, when a golfer starts to go downhill, it isn't his driving, or his approaching, that first fades. It's the putting touch. Leo Diegel told me that first, and others have since. The player starts worrying, and his whole game goes to pieces.

Corcoran switched to the Winter golf tours and their accuracy as a barometer as to what to expect in the open.

"The Master's Tournament at Augusta really is a preview of the open," he pointed out. "It is a championship course in every respect, and you'll notice that the winners are the topnotchers.

"Demaret won the Master's this year. So he may be the man to beat at Canterbury. One thing about it, he'll either win it or finish away down. I checked up on him. He's never finished second in a tournament. It's all or nothing with him."

And just to add to the general confusion, Corcoran says Snead reports that Guldahl has started to hit the ball again, and when Guldahl is hitting, he really takes charge of things.

Chicago Defeats Athletics 13 to 4 In One Big Inning

White Sox Score Ten Runs in Eighth To Clinch Game

CHICAGO, May 23 (AP)—The Chicago White Sox operated on the "one big inning" system today to come from behind and overwhelm the Philadelphia Athletics, 13 to 4, for their fourth straight victory.

In the eighth inning the Sox scored 10 runs, getting seven hits, including Taft Wright's homer with one on, while Philadelphia made four errors before Johnny Babich and Ed Heusser finally got the side out. Until then, the Athletics had a 4 to 3 lead:

Yanks' Comeback Campaign Hits Snag in Detroit

Winning Run Scored in Ninth with Three Men on Bases

DETROIT, May 23 (AP)—The comeback campaign of the world champion New York Yankees struck another snag today when the Detroit Tigers pushed across a run in the ninth inning to win a pitching duel between Buck Newsom and Red Ruffing, 3 to 2.

The struggle got away to a blustery, home-run beginning, with Joe DiMaggio and Hank Greenberg each hitting a four-bagger with a man on base. But then the two veteran righthanders tightened the screws for a scoreless stretch until the last of the ninth.

After Greenberg raised a fly to open the final frame, Rudy York singled, Bruce Campbell doubled and Pinky Higgins was purposely passed to fill the bases. Then Catcher Billy Sullivan slammed a fly into center to score York with the winning run.

52 Runs, 80 Hits Made In Four A. A. Tilts; Only Game Close

By The Associated Press

The fans who prefer free-hitting baseball—with plenty of traffic between the bull pens and the pitching rubbers — are getting their money's worth in the American Association.

In four games Wednesday night association clubs scored 52 runs and piled up an even 80 hits.

The league leading Kansas City Blues, downed Milwaukee, 10 - 5; Minneapolis defeated St. Paul, 12 to 5, and Louisville scored 10 runs on 12 hits to trim Indianapolis 10 to 5.

The only game of tight baseball was the Toledo-Columbus clash, which ended with the latter on the long end of a 3 to 2 count.

Grid Aces Licked, Then Arrested

OMAHA, Nebr., May 23 (AP)—Two Creighton University athletes, both star football players, were taken into custody by police yesterday after a street fight in which they were subdued by a lighter and smaller opponent.

They were Capt.-elect John Knolla, halfback and winner of the Puray Trophy as the out-standing 1939 player, and John Powers, also a halfback, known to his teammates as "John the Brain" because of his high schoolastic standing.

They were booked by police for intoxication and resisting and for drunken driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Clyde O'Brien, 160 pounds of formidable opposition, put Powers temporarily out of the fight and subdued Knolla.

Last World War Produced Gaudy Sports Characters

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, May 23 — Some gaudy characters in sports, violent and otherwise, were produced by the last World War. Mostly they were violent.

You could say that Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth, though neither of them saw military action, were products of the war, for their special types of violence — Dempsey's blood-letting in the hot sun at Toledo in 1919 and Ruth's bombardment of the garden walls with his big bat and the rabbit ball, beginning in 1921 — were what the post-war customers wanted in the way of smashing sound and electric action.

Georges Carpentier was a war man. He did a little fighting before the war, but he created a new and special kind of hysteria after the Armistice with his blond aggressiveness, his humming right hand, his lightning knockouts of Joe Beckett and Bat Levinsky. And Carpentier himself was crushed eventually by one of the most violent characters that war ever spawned.

Battling Siki A War Hero

Today there are said to be several thousand Senegalese troops (French) on the border of Italy, hungering for the blood of the men who wiped out Ethiopia. The Senegalese had no hatred for Italy in 1914-1918, but they fought for France just the same, and one of their number was a brave and brutal savage, born in the jungle, who was known in the ranks as Louis Phal.

He was twice decorated. He won the Croix De Guerre for conspicuous bravery in action. He paid no heed to shells or rifle fire, and the helmet on his wooly head was constantly in the forefront of the thickest scrimmage.

When a small boy, Phal had been adopted as a mascot in Senegal by a French actress, who brought him back to Paris and dressed him in a page's livery of bottle blue. About a year before the war broke out, he began to make his living as a prize-fighter, under the name of Battling Siki. He fought only half a dozen times, with indifferent success, before he joined the army and won regimental notoriety and reward with the blood-curdling frenzy of his bayonet charge.

Siki came out of the war hungry for more action. The French public felt the same way. Carpentier was the public's idol and the world's outstanding pugilistic hero, but Siki, though popular in Paris, did not enter Carpentier's sphere until the hero was smashed by Dempsey in 1921.

Then Carpentier needed a fight to reconstruct his prestige in rance, and Siki was picked for the victim. Carpentier's manager, Francois Descamps, took no chances. The fight was fixed. Siki agreed to fall down in the first round as a token of his good faith and then to go down permanently in the third round.

What A Surprise

The match proceeded as arranged, and Siki went down in the third round — but he did not stay down. The black savage from Senegal leaped to his feet as the count was tolling and hit Carpentier on the point of the chin. Dazed, Carpentier took a murderous mauling in the next two rounds and was knocked cold in the sixth. Battling Siki became the light heavyweight champion of the world.

Post-war Paris was his oyster, and the Senegalese smashed it open with a violent blow of his wallet. He bought a rainbow wardrobe. He tried to drink all the wine in Montmartre, and nearly succeeded. He walked the streets with a young lion on a leash, and sometimes carried a monkey on his shoulder.

Siki had a good heart, but his temper was quick and his manners were savage and simple. One day his feet hurt, so he went to the office of a chiropodist. The doctor refused to treat him. Siki picked up all the office furniture and hurled it out the window into the street.

After he lost the title through the dismal folly of fighting Michael Francis McTigue in Dublin on St. Patrick's day, the Senegalese came to America. He fought some, but chiefly he wandered about Hell's Kitchen in New York City by night, drinking wine or whisky, wrecking saloons, and punching cops and cab drivers. Once he was stabbed and recovered from the wound. Then, at last, the inevitable happened — the man who walked into German machine gun fire with his teeth gleaming was found shot to death, in the back, in a side-street gutter near his home. He had dragged his bleeding body 100 yards along the gutter before he died. Harlem gave him a Mohammedan funeral.

The war lasted all his life with Siki. As much as any man I know of, he was born for violence and violently lived and died.

Paw Paw Hi Defeats Fort Hill by 12 to 0

Fort Hill high school's baseball team traveled to Paw Paw yesterday and came home with nothing more than a goose-egg and a drubbing at the hands of Coach Arnett Swisher's Pirates, 12 to 0.

Robey was in his usual good form and blanked the Sentinels while limiting them to four hits. He played a big part in the Paw Paw attack getting two hits, one a homer, and accounting for five of his team's runs.

Frey opened for Fort Hill but was forced off the mound in the second after yielding three runs in the first. He was unable to check the onslaught with two gone in the second, when Paw Paw added four more counters.

Crawford replaced him and was nicked for eight hits in the two and two-thirds innings he hurled. Miller finished and checked the home team failing to yield a hit while retiring five batters.

Cubs Win 13-Inning Game from Phils

PHILADELPHIA, May 23 (AP)—Doubles by Bill Nicholson and Al Todd and a single by Bob Mattick gave the Chicago Cubs two runs and a 4 to 3 victory over the fighting Phillies in a 13-inning game at Shibe Park tonight.

A crowd of 7,801 that braved a drizzle and chilly weather saw the Phils almost pull the game out of the fire in their last time at bat, scoring one run and having the bases full when pinch hitter Herman Schulte grounded to Mattick for the final out.

Hugh Mulcahy, of the Phils, seeking his fifth straight win, and veteran Charlie Root, of the Cubs, had a pitching duel for ten innings. Root went out for a pinch-hitter in the eleventh but Mulcahy went the route.

Downfall of Michigan In Track Predicted By Ace Dopester

By The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich, May 23.—Overthrow of Michigan as Western Conference track champion was forecast today by Phil Diamond, whose dope sheets in the last decade have picked 18 winners in 19 meets.

Indiana will win the championship at Evanston, Ill., Friday and Saturday, the dark-haired Michigan German professor declared, with the Wolverines trailing by 5 points, Indiana's winning total he set at 49 points.

After wearing out dozens of pencils and erasers, Diamond emerged with the following predictions:

Indiana will win six first places, with Roy Cochrane taking the 220-yard dash and low hurdles and Archie Harris the shotput and discus.

Michigan will win three events, Breidenbach nosing out Cochrane in a great 440 race.

Ohio State will score 29 points to beat out Wisconsin for third place.

Michigan may have an ace up its sleeve in the prospect that Breidenbach may run the 220, Diamond said.

Scores of the other teams, he predicted, will be: Wisconsin, 27; Illinois, 21; Minnesota, 17; Purdue and Northwestern, 15 each; Chicago, 8, and Iowa, 1.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP)—We are warned by Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, to keep our eyes on the "touch putters" in the National Open early next month.

Corcoran lists Sam Snead, Jimmy Demaret, Byron Nelson, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Horton Smith and Ralph Guldahl as leading exponents of this method of dunking the ball, and, considering the class of these players, it would seem like advising you to keep your eyes on Joe Louis in a fight.

Elaborating, Corcoran says the Canterbury greens are fast, and that on a fast green the players who putt with that intangible something called "touch" or "feel" have a distinct advantage over the pendulum putters, or sweepers.

x x x x

"The National Open is won on the greens," he explains. "Check the winners of the last 25 years—Jones, Hagen, Sarazen, Goodman, Dutra, Manero, Parks and the rest—you'll find every one was a fine putter.

"In fact, Sam Parks proves the point that if you take the putting touch from the rest of the field and leave it to one man he'll win. Parks won at Oakmont in 1935 because he knew every blade of grass on the course.

"The putting touch is a tricky thing. You either have it or you haven't, and you don't know when it's going to leave or return. After Ed Oliver had shot a 64 in one of the Winter tournaments he told me he was afraid to go to bed because he might wake up with the touch gone.

x x x x

"And Demaret says there is little difference between a 68 and a 75—just a few putts that either dropped or didn't.

"Oddly enough, when a golfer starts to go downhill, it isn't his driving, or his approaching, that first fades. It's the putting touch. Leo Diegel told me that first, and others have since. The player starts worrying, and his whole game goes to pieces.

Corcoran switched to the Winter golf tours and their accuracy as a barometer as to what to expect in the open.

"The Master's Tournament at Augusta really is a preview of the open," he pointed out. "It is a championship course in every respect, and you'll notice that the winners are the topnotchers.

"Demaret won the Master's this year. So he may be the man to beat at Canterbury. One thing about it, he'll either win it or finish away down. I checked up on him. He's never finished second in a tournament. It's all or nothing with him."

And just to add to the general confusion, Corcoran says Snead reports that Guldahl has started to hit the ball again, and when Guldahl is hitting, he really takes charge of things.

Chicago Defeats Athletics 13 to 4 In One Big Inning

CHICAGO, May 23 (AP)—The Chicago White Sox operated on the "one big inning" system today to come from behind and overwhelm the Philadelphia Athletics, 13 to 4, for their fourth straight victory.

In the eighth inning the Sox scored 10 runs, getting seven hits, including Taft Wright's homer with one on, while Philadelphia made four errors before Johnny Babich and Ed Heusser finally got the side out. Until then, the Athletics had a 4 to 3 lead:

DRAMA AHEAD

When stocky Gene Sarazen, the Connecticut farmer, steps to the first tee in the New York qualifying district on Monday, there will be drama ahead. For Gene Sarazen will be entering his 21st consecutive U. S. Open Golf Championship. For the last twenty years he has played in every Open, but on this next occasion he must qualify along with Ben Hogan, one of the 1940 sensations.

Sarazen's first Open was in 1920 at Inverness, one of our finer tests. This was the year Bobby Jones also made his debut—the year Harry Vardon literally kicked away his final chance to win another major crown.

Two years later at Skokie, Chicago, stocky Gene came bounding through with Jones, Hagen and John Black in close pursuit. Sarazen was just 20 years old when the swarthy ex-caddie won the main title at Skokie, four days older than Francis Ouimet was when the Boston star beat Vardon and Ray at Brookline.

Sarazen's record of qualifying twenty straight years for the Open is phenomenal. In that span of time his record includes two U. S. and one British Open titles—three P.G.A. championships—and many a hot charge down the stretch.

His Next Stand

I have always contended that ex-champions, U. S. or British Open Champions, should be qualified automatically. This courtesy is extended in the National Amateur tournament to ex-amateur champions, who in the average degree of skill are far below the leading pros. Why not give ex-champion pros the same break?

There is no basis for a sound debate on this subject. In the first place, golf galleries get a certain traditional thrill from watching the play of those who have helped to make golf history—I mean a Bobby Jones, a Walter Hagen or a Gene Sarazen, to mention only a few.

Sarazen proved again that he is still a great golfer by finishing third in the recent Goodall round-robin, leading no less than twelve younger stars across the wire. And this was over a 126-hole test.

"A great showing for a golfer 45 years old," someone said to me. It so happens that Sarazen is just 38 years old. He was 18 when he opened fire and 20 when he won the first time.

It would be a sporting crime if he failed to qualify next Monday, for he has what so few carry—color added to skill and courage.

It was Sarazen who played the last 28 holes at Fresh Meadow in 100 strokes, 12 under even 4's to win his last Open. It was Sarazen who holed a 230-yard spoon shot in the Masters' at the Augusta National for a double-eagle 2 on a hole 510 yards in length, when he was trailing Craig Wood by three strokes, with ony four holes to play.

In his day and time through the run of the years this chunky Apawamis ex-caddie, who was carrying heavy bags cheerfully at the age of 9, has contributed more than his share of drama to golf. He came to the game as a caddie to help out a family with a few dollars—a family that needed a few dollars badly.

From that start he has starred around the world—America, North and South—Great Britain—France—Australia—Japan—the Phillipines—New Zealand—the Fiji Islands.

An Odd Entry.

Gene is still something different. He gives out interviews that make headlines for Sarazen. He does part of this with a half wink. Don't think he isn't smart.

A short while back I was sitting with him when a certain proamateur team was being sold at a certain pool. Someone bid $400 for one of the teams.

"That's beyond me," Sarazen said. "Here they are bidding $400 for two bum golfers when I can get a good cow for $200 anda fine pig for much less for my farm. It doesn't make any sense."

Naturally many of his remarks hardly endear Gene to many of his fellow pros. But this has never bothered Sarazen in any way. He lives his own life, thinks his own thinks, and says what he happens to feel like saying at the moment.

He has also had his shocks. After he won his first Open at Skokie in 1922 the combination of youth and glory staggered his judgment a trifle. He was playing in a tournament where his caddie had been a former fellow caddie.

"What do I need here?" Gene asked.

"A 7 iron will do it," his caddie said.

Sarazen played the 7 iron and was short of the green.

"You're a fine caddie," he said to his ex-caddie pal. "You can't even judge distance."

"Gimme that club," the caddie said as he dropped another ball and almost hit the pin. "And you're supposed to be the Open champion."

"That taught me a lesson," Sarazen said later. "A good caddie is usually right. The fault is nearly always with the player."

Sarazen's powerful, piano legs have been a big factor in his long success. They have left him tireless through the years. He has lived on those legs for 30 of his 38 years and don't forget what good legs mean in any sport—something so few have today.

Sarazen has been one of golf's greatest stretch runners. He may get away on slow foot and drop well back. But give his a chance at the head of the stretch and he will be something to catch.

Here's luck in his Monday round. The game of golf needs Gene more than Gene needs golf. He still has a first-class New England farm and he can still drive a tractor and milk his cows. — (Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

DRAMA AHEAD

When stocky Gene Sarazen, the Connecticut farmer, steps to the first tee in the New York qualifying district on Monday, there will be drama ahead. For Gene Sarazen will be entering his 21st consecutive U. S. Open Golf Championship. For the last twenty years he has played in every Open, but on this next occasion he must qualify along with Ben Hogan, one of the 1940 sensations.

Sarazen's first Open was in 1920 at Inverness, one of our finer tests. This was the year Bobby Jones also made his debut—the year Harry Vardon literally kicked away his final chance to win another major crown.

Two years later at Skokie, Chicago, stocky Gene came bounding through with Jones, Hagen and John Black in close pursuit. Sarazen was just 20 years old when the swarthy ex-caddie won the main title at Skokie, four days older than Francis Ouimet was when the Boston star beat Vardon and Ray at Brookline.

Sarazen's record of qualifying twenty straight years for the Open is phenomenal. In that span of time his record includes two U. S. and one British Open titles—three P.G.A. championships—and many a hot charge down the stretch.

In Memoriams

In memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Lillian Castle, who died one year ago today, May 24, 1939.

We often sit and think of her,
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend,
That grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak
When all other things decay,
Our love for her will still keep green,
And never fade away.

MRS. KATHERINE LEWIS,
MRS. EDITH SOMERVILLE.

In Memoriams

In memory of our dear sister Mrs. Lillian Castle, who died one year ago today, May 24, 1939.

We often sit and think of her,
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend,
That grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
When all other things decay,
Our love for her will still keep green,
And never fade away.

Celanese Routine Still Unaffected By War Abroad

Local Plant Running Full Blast To Fill Textile Orders

C. D. Walton, Celanese works manager here, said last night that the manufacturing routine at Amcelle has not been changed by the speed-up in American defense plans, and that no immediate change is in sight.

Mr. Walton indicated that the plant is still running full blast in practically all departments, with more than 9,000 persons employed.

Announcement was made in New York Wednesday of a proposed financial move which would allow the Celanese Corporation of America to spend upwards of $30,000,000 on plant expansion.

No indication was forthcoming from New York or local officials, however, what this would mean for the Cumberland plant.

The plans were revealed in a call for a stockholders meeting to approve raising the corporation's debt limit from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000, which would permit large scale refinancing and large expansion expenditures.

All business plans are likely to be uncertain now, however, because of the unexpected turn of events on Europe's war fields.

In the last six years, Celanese has spent $22,500,000 on plant expansion, President Camille Dreyfuss said.

New County Map Published Here

First of Its Kind In Last 23 Years

A new map of Allegany county that includes everything from the best fishing streams to the various highway tieups has been completed by Robert DeGrange, a free lance artist formerly with the Geodetic Survey of the U. S. Army.

The new map, the first up to date work of its kind in the last twenty-three years, was sponsored by H. W. Smith, Mason Hill, Charles L. Kopp, and the Second National Bank.

On Exhibition

Smith yesterday had the map on exhibition at the Chamber of Commerce office and said it would be sold for a dollar a copy.

The map is approximately thirty-eight inches by twenty-four inches in size and is in black and white. It includes the country's two new election districts, the principal industrial areas, hills and ridges, distances to primary points in the county from Cumberland, and fishing streams.

Shows City Streets

An insert shows all Cumberland streets and another insert ties in Allegany county in relation to the rest of the state.

Smith, Hill, and Kopp all approved the completed drawing and have had the map published.

Smith was especially pleased with the exact workmanship of the drawing and declared it should prove a helpful addition to many county offices and homes.

Awards Presented At Fort Hill

Student Senate Is Installed

The Student Council Department of Industry held its annual insignia assembly at Fort Hill high school yesterday morning, with Edward Spear as chairman.

To Betty Lucas went the school letter for declamation.

Honor letters were presented to honor students chosen by vote of teachers and students, including Ralph Reiter and Edward Spear, seniors; Anna Avers, junior; Donald Lathrum, sophomore; Arlene Chen, freshman; Eunice Brookley, eighth grade; and Norma Lee Cole, seventh grade.

The Girls League award was made to Patricia Lynch, while debate letters were presented to Jean Witherup, Oscar Strieby, Josephine Hoffmeister, Lorraine Brechbiel, Jack Smouse, Ralph Reitel, Norman Amtower and George Dayton.

Robert Smith, representing the swimming team, presented the swimming trophy to Principal Victor D. Heisey, who accepted it on behalf of the school.

Student Senate members for next year were installed and instructed as to their duties by the retiring Senate.

The new members are President Robert Smith, Marcella Davis, George Dayton, Edna Mae Johnson, Audrey Knight, Mary Blades and Betty Somerlatt. The installation ceremony was conducted by Harry Fritz, Maxine Smith, Harold Tansill, Edward Spear, Jean Witherup and Scott Shannon.

Opening exercises were conducted by Scott Shannon, and the Scripture was read by Edna Mae Johnson.

8 Eckhart Men Who Kept Mum Freed from Jail

Refused To Answer Harris's Questions In Beer Probe

The eight Eckhart men who were marched off to the county jail Wednesday afternoon upon order of State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris were promptly released yesterday morning.

The men were thrown into jail after they refused to give statements to Harris regarding Sunday beer drinking in Eckhart.

The men were ordered to Cumberland for questioning after two places in Eckhart were "visited" Sunday, the names of those present taken, and some beer allegedly confiscated.

The men were held in jail without charges being entered on the jail books.

It is probable that they will be called before the grand jury.

Word has been received by relatives in Cumberland of the death of Ernest Sutton, of Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday night at his home. He was 41.

Mr. Sutton had been ill with an unusual heart condition for more than a year. At one time he was engaged as a salesman of granite and marble supplies. He had frequently visited Cumberland.

Newsboys' Penny Will Fly to Europe

"Here's my penny," he said, placing the copper on the desk of the war relief headquarters of the American Red Cross, 45 North Liberty street.

He was just a litle boy, not more than nine or ten, who sells newspapers on the streets.

"So you want to do your bit, too, to help little girls and boys in Europe?" they asked him.

He nodded yes and hurried out.

Several hours later he was back. "What happens if the ship carrying my penny is sunk? he asked. "Will the little girls be hungry?"

Mrs. Lee W. Witherup, secretary of the organization committee, explained:

"You see," she said, the Red Cross will use this money to buy food, clothes, and medical supplies for Europe.

"And when enough supplies are ready they send the things immediately by the American Clipper, a big airplane which flies over the ocean, to the people who most need them. There aren't any passengers on the plane as every bit of space is used for Red Cross supplies."

The little fellow seemed satisfied and went out again with his bundle of papers.

Two More Win Pilot Permits

Celanese Employe, Farmer Pass Tests

Four Cumberland fliers took and passed Civil Aeronautics Authority license examinations yesterday at the Mexico Farms airport.

Jack DelaGrange, of Cumberland, who already has a commercial pilot's license, was licensed as a commercial aircraft engine mechanic.

Earl Stonestreet, of Flintstone, a farmer, and William L. Brode Jr., of Cumberland, a Celanese employe, both passed tests for a private pilot's license.

William B. Rannells, instructor at the local airport, passed a rating instructor's examination.

Instructor Rannells explained that solo licenses have now been dropped. New regulations put student fliers more directly under the supervision of the instructor until they have qualified for the private pilot's license.

Police on Watch For Dangerous Insane Patient

Man Thought Headed For Cumberland Again After Fleeing Asylum

Fear that a dangerously insane man, who escaped yesterday for the second time from an asylum near Pittsburgh, might be heading for Cumberland again was expressed at police headquarters last night.

The husky patient, identified as 49-year-old John Edward Connelly, broke out of the county home and hospital at Woodville.

In his previous escape in July, 1937, Connelly was nabbed here at the old Cavanaugh hotel on Baltimore street by Lieut. James E. Van and Officer Frank J. Zawaski.

Pittsburgh detectives warned that Connelly may be armed with a knife and urged other officers to "use precautions" in attempting to capture him.

The bulletin posted at headquarters here described Connelly as weighing about 210 pounds, wearing a brown suit and black shoes. It added, "This man is insane and dangerous."

Authorities in the Cumberland area were on the look-out for the man.

Scout Leaders Leave for Camp

Spending Week-End In the Mountains

Scoutmasters Raymond Reel and Chaster Bishoff of Keyser, George A. Angle of Piedmont, and Henry S. Adams of Romney will accompany Scout Executive Raymond C. Lalor, of Cumberland, to Camp Mountain Run near DuBois, Pa., to participate in a training camp today, tomorrow and Sunday. The party will leave the Fort Cumberland hotel this morning at 7 o'clock.

This course will be directed by Gunnar H. Berg, national director of volunteer training, who will be assisted by the Region III staff and expert local scouters and executives.

The purpose of the outing is to give instruction in practical methods for conducting long-term troop camps.

These men will serve as officials for a similar course for the benefit of Potomac Council scouters at the Council's camp site on the Milleson farm near Romney the week-end of June 8-9.

Men who participate in this camp have been advised to bring their tents, cooking gear, sleeping bags, and other essential gear for camping outdoors in the mountains. This will be a practical "on the ground, in the woods" training course.

First World War Recalled in Plea For Red Cross War Relief Drive

For Allegany county's Red Cross chairman, it's history repeating itself—this grim war that is spreading devastation over the face of Europe.

The war news this week, telling of events in the French towns of Laon and Noyon, brought back vivid memories of twenty years ago to Mrs. George Henderson. For twenty years ago, Mrs. Henderson was in Laon—helping to patch up the destruction wrought by World War I.

And now the cycle has brought ruin to Laon again.

With the desolation of twenty years ago etched deeply in her memory and brought out in high relief by today's tragic events, Mrs. Henderson makes a dramatic and moving appeal for funds to relieve, in small measure at least, the suffering of warring humanity, which, she says, is far worse than was ever dreamed of in World War I.

Writing in behalf of the Red Cross drive for $10,000,000 for war relief, $7,000 of which is sought in Allegany county, Mrs. Henderson begins by noting that "a few days ago, when I opened the newspaper, the names of two French towns leaped at me from the front page—Laon and Noyon.

"Exactly twenty years ago I was living in Laon in a house which had been headquarters for the German army in 1918. From that house we went out every day to our work which lay in the villages of the plain surrounding the hill on which the town of Laon is built. I wish I could make you see those villages as I saw them two years after the end of the war. Not one house was intact, many houses were literally only a pile of bricks. There were only a few trees which had not been killed by gas or high explosives — in many places the actual contour of the ground had been changed.

"I remember once taking a family of returning refugees out to where their home had been. When we got to the crossroads near which the farm house had stood, I saw a puzzled look beginning to come over their faces.

"The man said to me, 'Are you sure, Madame, that you are on the right road — there should be a little hill here, and there was a wood on the left.'

"To make a long story short, we could not positively identify the exact location of that farm. Great shell explosions barbed wire entanglements, gun emplacements, had so changed the face of the land that it was literally unrecognizable.

"Noyon was the railway station which we used when I was working in another unit of the same organization. When I say station it is a misuse of the word; there was no station left. It had been an important railhead. When I was there a couple of repaired tracks ran through a tangle of tracks, wrecks of cars, and so on. Sometimes at night the train would run past the stop, and passengers would get off in a sea of mud and grope their way back into the town. The villages we worked in there were similar to the ones we served at Laon. There were no houses which had not been shelled, there were no shops; there was nothing but ruin and devastation, and in the midst of it, patient people struggling to rebuilt their homes and their lives.

"Once again the people of France must face a future like this, but this time it is far worse, and the present must be faced before the future is reached. I was in Washington on Saturday and saw many of the heads of departments at Red Cross Headquarters. These men have been getting first-hand reports from workers overseas. They all tell the same story — conditions in Europe today are worse than anything we dreamed of in the last war; every relief agency and every hospital is overwhelmed—the speed and magnitude of this total war has brought needs which far exceed every estimate.

"Among other questions, I asked what the time limit for this war-relief drive was to be. The way these men answered me told a story in itself.

Speed Necessary

"'We know,' they said, 'you must have time to organize, and we can't expect to get all the money we need at once'—but on their faces one could read 'Hurry—hurry—lives which could be saved are being lost.'

"Everything is needed — clothing, shoes, layettes, food, ambulances, and medical supplies — in vast quantities. Many of the thousands of refugees are badly wounded; a new refinement has been added to war where low-flying planes machine-gun escaping civilians. The hospitals need all we can send them— ether, bandages, morphine—everything.

"First of all, let me stress that we are making this appeal in order to keep intact our funds for disaster relief, and so on, here. We must be prepared to take care of our own people always; in order to send urgently needed help abroad, too, we must ask for extra funds.

"A few people have said to me, 'Why should we send the money overseas?'

"I can answer in only one way. Suppose it were your boy lying desperately wounded in a field waiting for an ambulance which never came — suppose he was being operated on without an anesthetic — suppose he were screaming with pain, and there were no morphine. These things are happening today. Give what you can to the Red Cross, and help prevent some of the suffering which is being endured today by people who are fighting for the way of life we Americans believe in too."

City To Aid Negro Center

$3,000 Was Asked, Half That Promised

Leaders in the drive for a colored community center in Cumberland announced last night that the city is willing to contribute $1,500 to the cause.

The amount sought from the city was $3,000, but Lewine M. Weaver and Reginald Cooper said the city's willingness to give $1,500 was a welcome acknowledgement of the need for the project.

Weaver and Cooper said Mayor Irvine told them they could announce the city's willingness to help to that extent.

WPA To Furnish $30,000

An estimated $40,000 is required for the project, three-fourths of which would be furnished by the WPA.

The Cumberland branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is sponsoring a drive for funds, has already raised $600 and now will redouble its efforts.

Co-operation will also be sought now from the county commissioners.

Leaders of the drive, acting on a suggestion from the mayor, said they will form a governing board to handle the affairs of the proposed center. This board will be composed of the negro leaders and prominent white citizens who have volunteered to assist them.

$2,100 Already Raised

The city's promise of a contribution brings the total amount raised and pledged to $2,100, which is still a long way from the goal of $10,000—the amount which the sponsors must put up.

However, the city may be able to donate a site, which would cut another thousand or two off the amount to be raised.

Judge Accepts Weaver's Story On Zigzag Ride

Says He Dodged Ball Player, Bike, And Woman Driver

Robert T. Weaver had three very good reasons for "weaving" on the McMullen highway Monday evening, he testified in Trial Magistrates court yesterday.

Facing charges of drunken driving and reckless driving, Weaver, a Potomac Edison mechanic, who lives at 318 Crawford street, blamed his "weaving" on:

1. An elderly woman driver hogging the center of the highway.
2. A child bouncing a ball on one side of the highway.
3. A youngster on a bicycle on the other side of the highway.

Defense Attorney Clarence Shutter placed Weaver and three companions on the stand to testify that Weaver, driving toward Cresaptown, overtook a car shortly after passing the Celanese plant. Its elderly woman driver didn't move over and Weaver had to swerve far over to the left to pass.

A child bouncing a ball on that side of the road forced him to veer back to the other side, where, to avoid hitting a youngster on a bicycle, he had to swing sharply back again.

Officer Says Driver Drunk

State Trooper Carl G. Storm, spotting this zig-zag course, stopped Weaver and charged him with drunken and reckless driving. Storm blamed the erratic driving on intoxication, declaring that he knew Weaver and that his appearance and actions at the time of the arrest were not the same as on occasions when he knew Weaver was sober.

But Weaver's companions in the car and two others with whom he had been in the afternoon testified that he had nothing to drink.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew found the defendant not guilty on both counts.

Others Found Guilty

Two other traffic cases were heard here yesterday, one driver being heavily fined and another jailed in default of a stiff fine.

Bernardo Mancini, 55, of Dudley, Pa., was fined $100 and costs on a charge of drunken driving and $1 and costs for reckless driving.

Mancini, represented by Attorney F. Brooke Whiting, denied both charges, but Officers James J. Condon and Carl G. Stouffer testified that he was intoxicated when they arrested him Sunday night following a crash at Bedford and Decatur streets.

Contractor Jailed

Lyle C. Griffith, 36, of RFD 2, Cumberland, was committed to the county jail for 100 days in default of a fine of $100 and costs for driving on a revoked license. He pleaded guilty.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., said $100 was the minimum and $1,000 the maximum fine for the offense. A jail sentence can also be imposed with the fine, he said.

Griffith, a contractor, had his license revoked some time ago on several serious motor vehicle charges, records showed.

State Trooper George J. Miller arrested Griffith, Wednesday, on the National highway, about a half-mile west of Cumberland. Deputy Sheriff John Patten was with him at the arrest.

The NYA has set up an appropriation of $1,723 to pay the girls and one full-time supervisor and to purchase a small amount of equipment.

Articles to be made by the group include curtains, chair seats, chair covers, cushion covers, and hooked and crocheted rugs. In addition they will paint signs and handicraft work. # Motorcyclist Arrested As Noise Maker

Celanese Routine Still Unaffected By War Abroad

Local Plant Running Full Blast To Fill Textile Orders

C. D. Walton, Celanese works manager here, said last night that the manufacturing routine at Amcelle has not been changed by the speed-up in American defense plans, and that no immediate change is in sight.

Mr. Walton indicated that the plant is still running full blast in practically all departments, with more than 9,000 persons employed.

Announcement was made in New York Wednesday of a proposed financial move which would allow the Celanese Corporation of America to spend upwards of $30,000,000 on plant expansion.

No indication was forthcoming from New York or local officials, however, what this would mean for the Cumberland plant.

The plans were revealed in a call for a stockholders meeting to approve raising the corporation's debt limit from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000, which would permit large scale refinancing and large expansion expenditures.

All business plans are likely to be uncertain now, however, because of the unexpected turn of events on Europe's war fields.

In the last six years, Celanese has spent $22,500,000 on plant expansion, President Camille Dreyfuss said.

New County Map Published Here

First of Its Kind In Last 23 Years

A new map of Allegany county that includes everything from the best fishing streams to the various highway tieups has been completed by Robert DeGrange, a free lance artist formerly with the Geodetic Survey of the U. S. Army.

The new map, the first up to date work of its kind in the last twenty-three years, was sponsored by H. W. Smith, Mason Hill, Charles L. Kopp, and the Second National Bank.

On Exhibition

Smith yesterday had the map on exhibition at the Chamber of Commerce office and said it would be sold for a dollar a copy.

The map is approximately thirty-eight inches by twenty-four inches in size and is in black and white. It includes the country's two new election districts, the principal industrial areas, hills and ridges, distances to primary points in the county from Cumberland, and fishing streams.

Shows City Streets

An insert shows all Cumberland streets and another insert ties in Allegany county in relation to the rest of the state.

Smith, Hill, and Kopp all approved the completed drawing and have had the map published.

Smith was especially pleased with the exact workmanship of the drawing and declared it should prove a helpful addition to many county offices and homes.

8 Eckhart Men Who Kept Mum Freed from Jail

Refused To Answer Harris's Questions In Beer Probe

The eight Eckhart men who were marched off to the county jail Wednesday afternoon upon order of State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris were promptly released yesterday morning.

The men were thrown into jail after they refused to give statements to Harris regarding Sunday beer drinking in Eckhart.

The men were ordered to Cumberland for questioning after two places in Eckhart were "visited" Sunday, the names of those present taken, and some beer allegedly confiscatd.

The men were held in jail without charges being entered on the jail books.

It is probable that they will be called before the grand jury.

Newsboys' Penny Will Fly to Europe

"Here's my penny," he said, placing the copper on the desk of the war relief headquarters of the American Red Cross, 45 North Liberty street.

He was just a litle boy, not more than nine or ten, who sells newspapers on the streets.

"So you want to do your bit, too, to help little girls and boys in Europe?" they asked him.

He nodded yes and hurried out.

Several hours later he was back. "What happens if the ship carrying my penny is sunk? he asked. "Will the little girls be hungry?"

Mrs. Lee W. Witherup, secretary of the organization committee, explained:

"You see," she said, the Red Cross will use this money to buy food, clothes, and medical supplies for Europe.

"And when enough supplies are ready they send the things immediately by the American Clipper, a big airplane which flies over the ocean, to the people who most need them. There aren't any passengers on the plane as every bit of space is used for Red Cross supplies."

The little fellow seemed satisfied and went out again with his bundle of papers.

Police on Watch For Dangerous Insane Patient

Man Thought Headed For Cumberland Again After Fleeing Asylum

Fear that a dangerously insane man, who escaped yesterday for the second time from an asylum near Pittsburgh, might be heading for Cumberland again was expressed at police headquarters last night.

The husky patient, identified as 49-year-old John Edward Connelly, broke out of the county home and hospital at Woodville.

In his previous escape in July, 1937, Connelly was nabbed here at the old Cavanaugh hotel on Baltimore street by Lieut. James E. Van and Officer Frank J. Zawaski.

Police said the man had roomed at the hotel before being sent to Woodville.

Pittsburgh detectives warned that Connelly may be armed with a knife and urged other officers to "use precautions" in attempting to capture him.

The bulletin posted at headquarters here described Connelly as weighing about 210 pounds, wearing a brown suit and black shoes. It added, "This man is insane and dangerous."

Authorities in the Cumberland area were on the look-out for the man.

First World War Recalled in Plea For Red Cross War Relief Drive

For Allegany county's Red Cross chairman, it's history repeating itself—this grim war that is spreading devastation over the face of Europe.

The war news this week, telling of events in the French towns of Laon and Noyon, brought back vivid memories of twenty years ago to Mrs. George Henderson. For twenty years ago, Mrs. Henderson was in Laon—helping to patch up the destruction wrought by World War I.

And now the cycle has brought ruin to Laon again.

With the desolation of twenty years ago etched deeply in her memory and brought out in high relief by today's tragic events, Mrs. Henderson makes a dramatic and moving appeal for funds to relieve, in small measure at least, the suffering of warring humanity, which, she says, is far worse than was ever dreamed of in World War I.

Writing in behalf of the Red Cross drive for $10,000,000 for war relief, $7,000 of which is sought in Allegany county, Mrs. Henderson begins by noting that "a few days ago, when I opened the newspaper, the names of two French towns leaped at me from the front page—Laon and Noyon.

3. A youngster on a bicycle on the other side of the highway.

Defense Attorney Clarence Shutter placed Weaver and three companions on the stand to testify that Weaver, driving toward Cresaptown, overtook a car shortly after passing the Celanese plant. Its elderly woman driver didn't move over and Weaver had to swerve far over to the left to pass.

A child bouncing a ball on that side of the road forced him to veer back to the other side, where, to avoid hitting a youngster on a bicycle, he had to swing sharply back again.

Officer Says Driver Drunk

State Trooper Carl G. Storm, spotting this zig-zag course, stopped Weaver and charged him with drunken and reckless driving. Storm blamed the erratic driving on intoxication, declaring that he knew Weaver and that his appearance and actions at the time of the arrest were not the same as on occasions when he knew Weaver was sober.

But Weaver's companions in the car and two others with whom he had been in the afternoon testified that he had nothing to drink.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew found the defendant not guilty on both counts.

Others Found Guilty

Two other traffic cases were heard here yesterday, one driver being heavily fined and another jailed in default of a stiff fine.

Bernardo Mancini, 55, of Dudley, Pa., was fined $100 and costs on a charge of drunken driving and $1 and costs for reckless driving.

Mancini, represented by Attorney P. Brooke Whiting, denied both charges, but Officers James J. Condon and Carl G. Stouffer testified that he was intoxicated when they arrested him Sunday night following a crash at Bedford and Decatur streets.

Contractor Jailed

Lyle C. Griffith, 36, of RFD 2, Cumberland, was committed to the county jail for 100 days in default of a fine of $100 and costs for driving on a revoked license. He pleaded guilty.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., said $100 was the minimum and $1,000 the maximum fine for the offense. A jail sentence can also be imposed with the fine, he said.

Griffith, a contractor, had his license revoked some time ago on several serious motor vehicle charges, records showed.

State Trooper George J. Miller arrested Griffith, Wednesday, on the National highway, about a half-mile west of Cumberland. Deputy Sheriff John Patten was with him at the arrest.
